CAIRO. — Two bombs exploded late Wednesday in two theatres, kilometres apart, injuring five persons and smashing windows and furniture, police said.

The first explosion occurred at 10 p.m. at the Sphinx open-air cinema in the Agouza suburb of Cairo. Four persons were wounded in this incident.

The second bomb went off an hour later at the theatre of the Arab Music Institute, in downtown Cairo, injuring one person with flying glass splinters.

The newspaper "Al-Ahram" said police were investigating whether the two explosions were the work of the ultra-religious Fanatic and Retreat Society.

Earlier in the day, the government rounded up about 135 members of the fanatic group, after it kidnapped and killed a former cabinet minister, Dr. Mohammed Hussein Zahabi.

Yesterday, tens of thousands of mourners, sobbing, wailing and shouting "There is no God but Allah," marched in the funeral procession for Sheikh Zahabi.

Prayers for the slain sheikh's soul were offered at the Al-Azhar Mosque, the 1,000-year-old seat of learning where he used to teach Islamic theology.

In a gesture of Christian-Islamic solidarity, churches in other sections of Cairo rang their bells.

While the funeral was in progress, President Anwar Sadat issued a decree setting up a three-man military tribunal, under Major General Hassan Sadek, to try the "killers next week."

The planned visit of Premier Mamduh Salem to Austria next week has been cancelled, Austrian foreign ministry officials said yesterday. No new date has been set. There was no official explanation for the cancellation. But since Salem is also Interior Minister, the speculation was that the visit was dropped because of the violence in Cairo. (UPI, AP)

Ehrlich, Meshel agree to confer regularly

JERUSALEM POST REPORTER

TEL AVIV. — An accord to meet about every 10 days to discuss outstanding matters and to coordinate efforts was reached yesterday between Finance Minister Simha Ehrlich and Histadrut Secretary-General Yehoshua Meshel in their first "working meeting."

After the meeting, both men said that the meeting had been "cordial" and promised a smooth future for all such meetings.

Ehrlich said: "I pointed out that we had no conflict of interests. The Finance Ministry makes economic policy; the Histadrut attends to labour relations. We each have our own job to do. I went so far as to say that I would pull no economic surprises out of my sleeve and present the Histadrut with a fait accompli."

Ehrlich proposed that he receive authorization from the cabinet, as he asked Meshel to do from the Histadrut, to make joint decisions binding on both the government and the Histadrut. If they could not agree, "the government, of course, will make the final decision."

During the meeting, Meshel requested continuance of allowances for the first two children pegged 100 per cent to the cost-of-living index, Ehrlich agreed.

Meshel also presented a series of other requests, which Ehrlich asked him to formulate in writing. They included:

- Tax exemption on those earning "recognized" premiums or working night shifts;
- Increasing the tax exemptions for pensioners from 25 to 35 per cent;
- Setting up a public committee to discuss salaries in the public-government services (Ehrlich Agreed);

- Continuing the present exemption from value added tax for agricultural products and the dozen staple foods (Ehrlich agreed);
- Replacing the purchase tax with VAT.

In regard to the latter, Ehrlich said it had to be discussed by the competent authorities, but he favoured doing away with all but two taxes: income tax and VAT.

Later asked if this meant abolishing the travel tax, Ehrlich said "yes," but noted that it would be replaced with VAT.

The Finance Minister stressed that he meant to cut the budget by several billion pounds. Asked if this meant doing away with subsidies, he said, "This is not even a problem of secondary financial importance. I can't imagine doing away with all subsidies, but a decision in these matters should be taken in a few months." He declined to say which other items would be cut.

The Finance Ministry will continue greasing devaluations. As for "greasing black capital," he noted, "I don't see why this is a problem. I promised to inform Meshel before any decision was taken."

Ehrlich promised to intensify tax collection. This would be done by strengthening the tax-collection setup, and by tapping better sources of information.

Ehrlich favoured reducing the linkage of bonds. If inflation was brought under control, linkage would not be necessary anyway, he said.

Eban decides to go to U.S.

By JOSHUA BRILLIANT

JERUSALEM POST Political Reporter

TEL AVIV. — Former Foreign Minister Abba Eban yesterday accepted the government's request to go on an information mission to the U.S. He told The Jerusalem Post he will leave on July 24 or 25.

The date was fixed at a meeting with Prime Minister Menachem Begin in Jerusalem yesterday evening. Eban will leave right after Begin returns from his trip.

Eban said there have been daily contradictory developments in Washington's policy, but that the situation "might crystallize" during Begin's visit, and he would then have a better idea of the "information problems" he would face.

Furthermore, by going after Begin's trip, he himself would not be pressed for time.

Eban has informed Labour Party chairman Shimon Peres of his decision.

His colleagues in the Labour Alignment Knesset faction had criticised the trip, but left the decision with him. Some, like former Finance Minister Yehoshua Rabinowitz, said the government's offer was a Likud attempt to undermine Labour.

Others could not understand how a leading "dove" like Eban could go on a "public-relations mission" for the "hawkish" government.

Eban said yesterday that, except for ambassadors, no one presents views which are his own. His main effort will be to try to maintain the kind of backing Israel had enjoyed in the past, when there was no talk of a Palestinian homeland and a return to the June 1967 boundaries.

Chinese pilot flies Mig 19 to Taiwan

TAIPEI. — A squadron leader in the Chinese Air Force defected to Taiwan yesterday in his Mig-19 fighter, and local radio reports said he was carrying important military documents. Military sources here said that the defection nearly triggered the first air battle between the Communists and Nationalists in 18 years, when other Mig-19s tried to intercept the plane.

A Nationalist Chinese military spokesman said the pilot, named as Fan Yuan-yen, 41, was safe after his mid-afternoon flight across the Taiwan Straits from the eastern Chinese province of Fukien.

The Central News Agency (CNA) reported that on landing at the southern Taiwanese air base of Tainan, the pilot said of China: "Life there is miserable. I can't stand it any longer."

Fan will receive 5,000 ounces of gold — equivalent to more than $800,000 at the Taiwan market price — under a standing offer by the Nationalist government.

Premier calls for political truce in Middle East

By JUDY SIEGEL

JERUSALEM POST Reporter

Prime Minister Menachem Begin last night called on the leaders of Egypt, Jordan and Syria to join in a "political armistice" before going to a renewed Geneva conference and to refrain from telling each other about what constitute borders and national security in the region.

"If they continue to make such statements in the months ahead, our only conceivable response is that we will tell them where are our boundaries, what is our national security, and where lies the future of our children."

The prime minister was addressing the 80th national convention of the Zionist Organization of America at the Binyamin Ha'ooma in Jerusalem. The ZOA's 1,000 delegates, along with thousands of tourists and immigrants, gave Begin frequent standing ovations.

Responding to statements by Egyptian President Anwar Sadat this week that his country would retaliate against Israel if it used atomic bombs, Begin said: "Israel will not threaten anyone...we wish the Egyptian people well."

Begin, addressing himself to U.S. President Jimmy Carter said: "I hope Mr. Carter will order the moving of the U.S. Embassy to Jerusalem. Jerusalem was a capital," he declared, "long before London, Paris and Brussels. Why should it be the only such place without an American embassy?"

The ZOA, claiming 120,000 members and established soon after the first World Zionist Congress in Basel 80 years ago, is affiliated to the General Zionist Movement.

Senator Robert Dole, Gerald Ford's vice-presidential candidate in the last election, said he fully agrees with Prime Minister Begin's depiction of the West Bank as "liberated territory, not occupied territory."

The Kansas Republican added: "If Israel wishes to relinquish all or part of the West Bank by negotiations, that is her right. It is not her obligation."

Senator Dole said: "Let us not defend Israel's so-called conquests, but let us not also defend Arab conquests."

Jerusalem, said the senator, is historically and legally a Jewish city, and "in the search for a solution, whatever else may be negotiable, the Capital of Israel clearly is not."

Israel's return to the pre-1967 borders would jeopardize her security. "The inescapable truth is that these borders led not to peace but to war."

President Jimmy Carter, in a special message to the convention, said both Israel and the U.S. desire peace. "I assure you of my administration's commitment to the security of Israel and to the realization of our shared goal of peace," he said.

Begin readies peace ideas

Post-Mideast Affairs Editor

Prime Minister Menachem Begin yesterday began putting the finishing touches on the Middle East peace formula which he will discuss with U.S. President Jimmy Carter in Washington in ten days.

During the day, the Premier had a long conference with Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan and Defence Minister Ezer Weizman. The three were expected to meet again before Begin presents his detailed peace concepts to a special cabinet meeting next week, on the eve of his departure to the U.S.

Officials in Jerusalem declined to disclose information on Begin's deliberations with Dayan and Weizman. However, they are understood to have touched on Israel's position on the specific components of the Middle East conflict, including the question of peace treaties, withdrawals and the future of Judea, Samaria, and the Gaza Strip.

Informed sources said that Begin had devoted considerable time to analyzing policy statements made by President Jimmy Carter at his meeting with American Jewish leaders on Wednesday. Begin and Dayan are due to hear a full report on that meeting today from Rabbi Alexander Schneider, chairman of the Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations, who arrived last night together with the Conference Director-General, Yehuda Hellman.

Preliminary reports indicated general satisfaction among the American Jewish leaders with Carter's pronouncements, especially those reasserting Washington's identification with Israel on the conception of Middle East peace and declaring that there has been no deviation from the longstanding policy committing the U.S. to mediating between Israel and the Arabs rather than imposing a settlement on them.

The same reports, however, reflected apprehension by some Jewish leaders over Carter's prescription for Israeli pullbacks towards the pre-1967 frontiers and for a "Palestinian homeland or entity" being presented as an "American policy." Fears were expressed that Carter's stance on these two issues were raising the expectations of the Arabs, who, if frustrated, might impede the progress toward a negotiated peace.

The same leaders are said to have been particularly disturbed by Carter's stance on the question of defence, which involves arms supplies and the Israeli co-production and sale of weapons under U.S. licence. They noted that there was no sign of a change in the U.S. Administration's attitude on these issues, in spite of the fact that Congress had placed Israel in the same "special-relationship" category that formal allies of the U.S. enjoy.

Carter is also seen as having dealt Israel a rebuff by his second denial of Israel's request to sell Ecuador 24 Kfir fighter-bombers equipped with American engines. The request had originally been denied last February, on the grounds of what was described as pure American strategic and economic considerations.

Christian rejects call by PLO for truce in south

BEIRUT (UPI). — A high-ranking Christian official yesterday rejected a Palestine Liberation Organization offer of a cease-fire in southern Lebanon.

"A cease-fire alone will not stop the fighting and will not do any good," said Karim Pakradouni, head of the Phalangist Party's political bureau.

However, he proposed a withdrawal by all rival factions to positions 15 kilometres from the Lebanese-Israeli border.

On Tuesday, the PLO had suggested through the intermediary of a Shia Muslim group representing villagers in southern Lebanon that the terrorists would lay down their arms in the battle-scarred region if the Christians in the south did the same.

Abuhatzaira pledges support for return to Ikrut and Biram

TEL AVIV (Itim). — Religious Affairs Minister Aharon Abuhatzaira said yesterday that he will urge the government to permit the Maronite former inhabitants of Biram and Ikrut on the northern border to return to their homes.

Speaking to members of the Moslem Shari'a religious court in Jaffa, the minister said he hoped the cabinet would approve "this fine move" in order to emphasize the difference between the new government and the previous Labour administration.

The Maronite Christian Arabs left the two villages on the border with Lebanon during the 1948 War of Liberation, after a promise from Israel Defence Forces commanders in the area that they would be permitted back as soon as the security situation allowed.

No decision on F-16 production rights

By WOLF BLITZER

JERUSALEM POST Correspondent

WASHINGTON. — The U.S. is not expected to reach a final decision on Israel's pending request for co-production rights to the F-16 fighter-bomber and other military items before Prime Minister Menachem Begin's visit to Washington later this month, U.S. officials disclosed yesterday.

They said that this controversial issue would be discussed in considerable detail during the Begin talks with President Jimmy Carter, scheduled for July 19-20.

They pointed out that nearly all of the related branches of the U.S. government — including the Pentagon and the State Department — have made initial recommendations on the co-production of the F-16, but the final decision would have to be made by the President.

Within the Pentagon there is a consensus that Israel should receive some co-production rights, but nowhere as high a percentage as Israel is requesting, the officials said.

The issue of co-production of the F-16 was not raised directly with Carter during a meeting Wednesday with American Jewish leaders. But they did raise the issue with Secretary of State Cyrus Vance during a preliminary session Wednesday at the White House.

Vance, who said that the U.S. was currently supplying Israel with a $5b. arms pipeline and would do everything necessary to see Israel remain militarily secure, would say only that the co-production requests were being fully studied.

The President also gave a strong statement of support for Israel's security needs, but did not get into specifics. He gave his word "as a man" that he would never do to Israel what he charged former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger had done during the six-month 1975 "reassessment" — withhold arms from Israel for political purposes.

White House officials yesterday were generally pleased with the reaction from the Jewish leadership to the meeting. They feel that the President successfully allayed many concerns, especially on the matter of the definition of peace.

Jewish leaders at the session were cautious yesterday in assessing the meeting. They said that the President had in fact made very reassuring statements, but they noted that similar statements had been made in the past.

White House counsel Robert Lipshutz yesterday described the meeting with the Jewish leadership as having been "very constructive." He said that it allowed the Jewish leadership to receive "a much fuller understanding" of the Administration's Middle East policies.

Lipshutz, who participated in the meeting, also said that the Jewish leaders had an opportunity to express their concerns and interests directly to the President, and this was useful.

Addressing the Overseas Writers Club, Lipshutz declined to go into details on the U.S. policy toward the Middle East, explaining that Carter has called for a moratorium on such statements until after the Begin visit.

Ironically, Carter himself had broken that moratorium by opening the first part of his meeting with the Jewish leadership to the White House press corps.

Jewish leaders here were especially pleased by two points the President made during the meeting: first, that any overall settlement should include full diplomatic relations between Israel and the Arab states, and second, that the U.S. opposed the establishment of an independent Palestinian state in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, wishing instead to see any Palestinian "homeland" have links with Jordan.

The President confirmed during the meeting that the leaders of Egypt, Syria and Jordan are themselves not keen on the idea of an independent Palestinian state established between Israel and Jordan — and all recognize now that any Palestinian homeland in the West Bank would have to be part of Jordan.

COMPROMISE REACHED BETWEEN COMMUNITIES

Barriers lifted on Rehov Hashomer

BNEI BRAK. — Barriers will not be placed across Rehov Hashomer here tomorrow — this was the result of a compromise agreement thrashed out late last night between representatives of the religious and non-religious communities in the city.

the barriers — one of which resulted in the death of Herzl Attiya last Friday night — and they will permit only local residents to use the road. The agreement, which represents a return to the status quo in force up to three weeks ago, will be honoured by both sides until the High Court of Justice comes to a decision on the issue in three weeks' time.

Representatives of the religious community told him late last night that they hoped the compromise agreement would be kept, but their members would come out "in their thousands" tonight and would stop traffic along Rehov Hashomer by force if the police failed to see that the compromise was honoured to the letter. Meanwhile Bnei Brak Mayor Yisrael Gottlieb has sent a cable to Prime Minister Begin and the three religious ministers in the cabinet urging them to see that the agreement is, in fact, honoured.

Earlier yesterday, the threat of a secular-religious confrontation had increased, as some 15,000 religious residents had planned to demonstrate today unless the police restricted vehicular traffic in Rehov Hashomer tonight and tomorrow. At the same time, organizers of a committee representing secular parties threatened to defy a police ban against holding a protest assembly there late this afternoon.

Begin asks Egypt to stop violating Sinai accord

Prime Minister Menachem Begin yesterday informed UN Middle East forces commander Ennio Sillavuo that the Egyptians are violating the Sinai interim agreement by keeping thousands more than their allowed number of troops on the east side of the Suez Canal.

Informing the Finnish general that Israel believes international agreements should be kept, Begin asked Sillavuo to pass his message on to the Egyptians. He said that there were any complaints against Israel, Jerusalem would without delay restore the situation to what it is supposed to be under Israel's international obligations.

Begin said that all parties concerned should be concentrating now on the process of establishing peace, and that Israel did not desire any local problems of violation of agreements which all had accepted. According to the Prime Minister's Bureau, Gen. Sillavuo said he would transmit the announcement to Egypt and do all he could to see that the Egyptians understand that they must return to the permitted number of troops east of the Canal.

During the meeting, the Prime Minister also asked Sillavuo to raise with the Syrians the problem of returning for burial the body of Israeli agent Eli Cohen, who was hanged in Damascus in 1965 for spying. Gen. Sillavuo said he would do his best.

METULLA (Hm). — A fourth "Good Fence" border post on the Lebanese border has been opened recently to give villagers from the "Bad Dv" ("Pataklad") area access to Israeli Defence Forces medical facilities.

The villages on the other side of the new "Good Fence" post have long been noted for their antagonism towards Israel and until recently have shunned the services and work opportunities at the other "Good Fence" posts in Metulla, Dovev and Hanita. The change in their attitude started when they began asking the medical and doctors in nearby IDF units for advice across the border fence. The wire was soon parted to allow regular access to the tent from which the new border post is starting to grow.

Likud wants to join Histadrut coalition

Jerusalem Post Political Reporter TEL AVIV. The Likud faction in the Histadrut yesterday said it wishes to join the Alignment-led coalition, but Secretary-General Yeruhm Meisel replied that he wishes to consult his party colleagues first.

The Likud's Daniel Nahmani made the request at a ceremony in which the officially certified June 21 election results were presented to Meisel. Nahmani said his faction had decided to tell Meisel to "stop calling us opposition. I want you to call me coalition."

Nahmani told The Jerusalem Post that the fact that the Likud heads the government will not stop him, as a workers' representative, from joining the Histadrut in opposing government policies when warranted.

The Labour Alignment won 56.03 per cent of the votes, and does not need the Likud to form a majority.

Anti-Semitism forces AJC to shut down in Argentina

NEW YORK (AP). — The American Jewish Committee said yesterday it was closing its office in Buenos Aires because of anti-Semitism and threats against the life of its Argentine envoy.

Richard Maas, the Committee president, said the office would not be reopened unless the Argentine government takes strong measures against anti-Semitism and arrests those who harassed and threatened the envoy.

Maas blamed the threats made against the life of envoy Jacobo Kovadloff and his family on right-wing extremists who hope to bring down the ruling military junta headed by President Jorge Rafael Videla.

The Committee has asked the U.S. to formally protest against the harassment of its representative. Kovadloff, who is Argentinean, and his family arrived in New York City on Wednesday. The family was reported in seclusion. Maas said Kovadloff, a well-known spokesman for Argentina's 400,000-member Jewish community, hopes to return home soon.

Maas said the Committee is not satisfied with the Videla government's attempts to stamp out anti-Semitism.

Ashdod container terminal dedicated

ASHDOD (Itim). — The modern container terminal in the port here was dedicated yesterday with a bottle of champagne smashed on the base of the largest crane, and workers and management pledging a new chapter in the history of the dispute prone port.

The terminal was opened after 18 months of negotiations between the works committee and management over cuts in manpower necessitated by the computer-coordinated machinery.

Directly after the ceremony, workers started unloading the Andrus, a container freighter. The management and members of the works committee retired to an office to say goodbye to outgoing port manager Yitzhak Gazit and to meet the new manager Hadar Kimhi.

PROF. FRIEDMAN TALKS TO MKs No such thing as free lunch (the rest is interpretation)

Professor Milton Friedman concluded his two-hour meeting with members of the Knesset Finance and Economic Committee in Jerusalem yesterday with a succinct summary of his economic theory — "there is no such thing as a free lunch."

The controversial U.S. economist, here to receive an Honorary Doctorate from the Hebrew University, aired his views on the full range of Israel's current economic problems.

The Government Press Office, reporting on the meeting, stated that he was adamant that the country's current inflation could only be curbed by limiting monetary growth by cutting down public expenditure.

Likewise, he strongly recommended that the government should reduce its involvement in the economy, should relinquish foreign-currency controls, and should do away with tenant protection. He stressed, however, that these moves need not necessarily be made at once, but could be introduced gradually.

As for the problem of "stagflation" (inflation accompanied by lack of economic growth), Prof. Friedman said everything possible should be done to reduce "concealed unemployment" and to redeploy workers in more productive sectors of the economy.

He suggested that the current tenant and job-protection laws prevented the mobility necessary for such redeployment. He noted that a law against dismissal was, in fact, a law against employment — because if an employer finds it difficult to fire an employee, he will be reluctant to hire a new one.

Prof. Friedman was also strongly opposed to the system of subsidies, and said that if subsidies must be paid, they should be paid openly. Aid to development areas should be in the form of grants rather than unlinked loans, he said, noting that while this would inflate budgetary figures, it would not burden the budget significantly in real terms.

Prof. Friedman did not believe that freeing the exchange rate would affect inflation, noting that it would, however, encourage exports without the need for the present recourse to tax benefits for exporters — a practice of which he strongly disapproves.

As for the question of economic independence, he believes that this is a myth, and countries like Israel would be better advised to develop to their utmost their economic ties with other countries, thereby creating what he called a "mutual interdependence."

At the end of the meeting, the chairman of the finance committee, Shlomo Lorincz (Agudat Yisrael), said he doubted that it was possible to summarize the theory of economics in a two-hour meeting as Friedman did. "What is the point of a single phrase?" he asked. "What is the point of saying to your fellow man — that is the sum of the whole Torah. The rest is elaboration: go and learn it."

Friedman rose to the challenge with a neat parody of the learned sage: "There is no such thing as a free lunch — that is the sum of economic theory, the rest is elaboration."

Bomb suspects released

JERUSALEM Post Reporter PETAHTIKVA. — Police had released all suspects by last night in connection with Wednesday's explosion at the local municipal vegetable market, in which one person was killed and 20 others were wounded.

About 100 Arabs who were in the vicinity at the time had been held for questioning.

The Palestine Liberation Organization has said that its agents planted the bomb.

The victim of the explosion, Tzila Galili, was buried yesterday in Petahtikva. Interior and Police Minister Yosef Burg, representing the Prime Minister, delivered eulogies stressing the tragic fact that Mrs. Galili, a Russian immigrant and wife of an ally activist, had died in the country where she came to rebuild her life. On its way to the cemetery, the long funeral cortege passed through the streets of Petahtikva, stopping outside the Central Synagogue, where Mrs. Galili's son said kaddish.

Nine of the wounded are still being treated at Beilinson Hospital, three reported in serious condition. One of the latter is a young man from Nahal whose police have discounted as a suspect because marketplace people vouch for him.

One wounded woman is reported in very good condition at Sharon Hospital, and a pregnant woman at Sheba Medical Center is said to be recovering after a complicated hand operation.

Itm reports that Petahtikva Mayor Yisrael Feinberg has renewed his urgent request for Border Police patrols in the city. Declaring that such patrols in Tel Aviv, Netanya and Kfar Saba had proved their effectiveness, he noted police officials about the matter but has not yet received a reply. He pointed that hundreds of Arabs from the administered territories come to Petahtikva daily to work or to shop.

Wednesday's was the third sabotage explosion in the city in the past year.

Study on power station 'one-sided'

HAIFA. — Technion Professor Michael Poreh yesterday described as "unacceptable" an Israeli Electric Corporation report on the expected environmental effect of the coal-fired power station it is now building at Hadera.

He noted that the Ilim study must be considered "completely one-sided," since it was made by the IEC itself, without an independent check of its data or conclusions. The report said the station would have no adverse effect on the environment.

The first of the station's four generating units is slated to start operating in 1980.

Prof. Poreh, specialist in environmental fuel mechanics, was asked by The Jerusalem Post to comment on a symposium held at the Tel Aviv Medical School on Tuesday. Speakers, including IEC representatives, said that the station would not exceed the air-pollution limits laid down by the Israel Standards Institute.

He reported that he himself had made a superficial study of the IEC report, "and I dispute some of its findings." But he said he would have to make an exhaustive check of the findings in order to present an objective critique. He said he had asked the Interior Ministry's Environmental Protection Service for a IL100,000 budget to make an objective check of the report, but the funds were unavailable.

"We are in the anomalous position where the IEC spends a large sum of the public's money to prepare a one-sided report, in order to show that its new multi-million-pound power station will have no adverse environmental impact; but we are unable to get a small fraction of that sum to check the study," he said. Former Finance Minister Yehoshua Rabinowitz had denied the Environmental Service's request for IL100,000 to check the report, and he hoped that the new minister would provide the funds.

Prof. Poreh also took exception to the theoretical models on which the IEC study was based. He said there were "very large differences" in the results depending on the type of model used. Furthermore, experience had shown that theoretical models were very inexact. (According to a previous study by the IEC the Reading D station should have no adverse environmental effect.)

As far as he could judge, the model used for the study had not taken into account at all the effect of the proximity of the sea to the new station.

"The proper procedure would be for an independent check of the IEC study," he stressed.

He noted that in his Technion department of civil engineering construction had just started on a wind tunnel, to be completed by November, which would make possible a study based on a physical model of the station and meteorological conditions at its site. It would be possible to initiate "dynamic management" of the station's operation. Forecasts from the Meteorological Service would be used to predict pollution effects on a day-to-day basis. "Then we would be able to order a changeover from coal to low-sulphur oil fuel for those days on which adverse conditions, such as meteorological inversion, were expected."

He felt that such public management of a potential high pollution source should certainly be enforced.

Coalition talks resume Sunday

By JOSHUA BRILLIANT
Jerusalem Post Political Reporter

Coalition talks between the Likud and the Democratic Movement for Change will be resumed on Sunday morning at the Prime Minister's Office in Jerusalem, the parties announced yesterday.

The DMC's negotiating team, which met at Prof. Yigael Yadin's home yesterday, decided to stress its demand for electoral reform, "considerable authority" for the deputy prime minister (meaning Yadin), and freedom from coalition discipline when foreign-policy questions come up for a vote in the Knesset.

The DMC wants a 'sweeping electoral reform. Its decision, on Wednesday, to return to the negotiating table follows a understanding that the National Religious Party will be allowed to veto the reform if the new system gives the NRP fewer mandates than under the present proportional system.

In addition to seeking to place Yadin in a position where he could coordinate the activities of the ministries involved in social affairs, the DMC wishes to discuss changes in the portfolios reserved for it. Prime Minister Menachem Begin has kept open the portfolios of Justice, Social Betterment, and Transport and Communications.

Jerusalem Post Correspondent WASHINGTON. — The United States is expected shortly to approve the sale of 60 F-15 fighter bombers to Saudi Arabia, including 15 trainer models. "The Washington Star" reported yesterday from Riyadh.

Diplomatic correspondent Henry S. Bradsher said that the expected U.S. announcement of the sale "might be paired with a promise to provide more warplanes to Israel... in an effort to make U.S. policy look balanced."

He said that Saudi Arabia is pressuring the U.S. to sell it the F-15s, "and is getting impatient with delays."

Any proposed sale of F-15s to Saudi Arabia would have to be approved by the Congress, where pro-Israel members can be expected to state their opposition because of the fear that the planes might be used against Israel.

First teams here for Maccabiah

BEN-GURION AIRPORT (Itim). — The first overseas contingents to the Tenth Maccabiah Games, due to open next Tuesday, arrived here yesterday in a blaze of colour.

First to arrive was the 160-strong Australian contingent, dressed in light-green suits and bright yellow hats sporting the distinctive team insignia of a kangaroo against the background of a Magen David. The cricket-bats carried by several members of the contingent attracted considerable interest, as this will be the first time that cricket will be played at the Maccabiah. The Australians arrived on two separate flights, the advance guard arriving by Air France, closely followed by the main contingent in an El Al Boeing.

Next to arrive were the Canadians, dazzling in their red-and-white uniforms and purple cowboy-hats. The 160-member Canadian contingent was followed by the small but versatile Dutch team, which will be competing in several events, including swimming, tennis and athletics.

The last team to arrive yesterday were the Mexicans, whose 100 athletes were accompanied by the Mariachos national music troupe. A potentially embarrassing incident became merely amusing when one of the customs officials inadvertently asked the Mexican ambassador, who had come to greet the sportsmen, if he had anything to declare. The surprised diplomat presented his passport, and the matter was forgotten.

The Australians, who include several athletes who took part in last year's Montreal Olympics, have high hopes of taking several gold medals — but their team captain was too modest to say just how many, merely noting that they would do their best to win all they could.

El Al has set up a special team to handle the arriving sportsmen, and the various customs and immigration formalities went off smoothly and quickly yesterday. The only hitch in an otherwise faultless operation involved the Canadians, who were kept waiting a considerable time before the buses taking them to their hotel showed up.

The airport is now bracing itself to handle the remaining overseas contingents due to arrive during the next few days. The reported arrival of a group of American Red Indians, complete with furs and feathers, has aroused particular excitement, as the organizers of the games knew nothing about their impending arrival until a few days ago.

40,000 schoolchildren still looking for jobs

By AARON SITNER
Jerusalem Post Reporter

The worst period of vacation-time unemployment for youth since the 1968-69 recession is now plaguing labour exchanges throughout the nation.

"More than 40,000 schoolchildren eager to work instead of waste time want jobs, but we just don't have enough openings," Zalman Chen, spokesman for the Labour Ministry's employment service, told The Jerusalem Post yesterday.

Chen described the situation as "painful and apparently insoluble," as providing summer jobs is an act of goodwill by private employers rather than a duty of the state. According to Chen, traditional summer work for children, beginning at age 14, includes such chores as gardening, light cleaning in industries and institutions, and filing and archival duties in business and educational institutions. Does the serious outburst in summer jobs herald a wave of general unemployment? Chen doesn't think so. He showed The Post day-old statistics from Galilee and other areas indicating a stable job market with actual shortages of workers in certain areas such as Nahariya, Acre, and Carmiel.

In Nahariya, a textile plant pleaded for — and received — 45 workers from Lebanon to keep production going. "But the problem of jobs for schoolchildren really disturbs us," Chen repeated. "If anybody can offer work to a pupil — even for 10 days — he will be doing the right thing by calling his local labour exchange. We have set up special telephone numbers in the four large cities: In Jerusalem, 249251; in Tel Aviv, 280133; in Haifa, 523203; and in Beersheba, 24383."

Shouting match in Ashdod council

ASHDOD (Itim). — Shouts were exchanged in the local municipal council on Wednesday evening when opposition member Daniel Dadon accused the coalition — consisting of the Alignment, the Likud and the National Religious Party — of accepting payments for approval of municipal tenders on taxing and roof insulation and on improvements of municipal property.

Mayor Zvi Zeilek, after shouting at his coalition partners for not responding to the charges, told Dadon to file a formal complaint with the police and not occupy the council time with unsubstantiated allegations.

The council decided to postpone approval of the tenders until the next session. The council exploded a second time when Dadon asked for an explanation of Deputy Mayor Yosef Avital's trip to England, which he suggested was being made at public expense.

UK seminar to honour dissident

JERUSALEM POST Correspondent LONDON. — About 150 of the world's leading scientists will gather in Oxford next week for a three-day seminar in honour of Professor Benjamin Levich of Moscow. Levich himself will not be there; the Soviet authorities have denied him permission to attend, but a scientific paper written by him and smuggled out of Moscow will be read. Other Soviet scientists who were invited have declined.

Among the seven scientists coming from Israel will be Yevgeni Levich, one of Benjamin's sons, who is now at the Weizmann Institute. His other son, Alexander, who is working in London, will also attend. Nobel Prize winner Sir Derek Barton, of Imperial College, chairman of the seminar committee, said yesterday in a press conference that the scientists will gather to mark Levich's 60th birthday, to review progress in the scientific fields in which he has a world reputation and "to make a public demonstration of the esteem in which he is held both as a scientist and as a man." During the press conference a telephone call came through from Levich in Moscow. In excellent English, he said that leaving the Soviet Union was "a question of life and death for me. My life here is impossible both as a scientist and as a human being. I am out of touch with every kind of scientific life."

I asked him if he feared any repercussions as a result of the seminar. His wife, Tanya, took the phone and answered: "I am afraid of renewed danger for my husband. But he will not stop fighting, even if he is persecuted."

Professor Brian Spalding, organizer of the seminar, ended the conversation by assuring the Levichs that the struggle on their behalf by the international scientific community also would not cease.

Levich first applied to emigrate to Israel in 1972. Since then, he has been dismissed from his post at Moscow University. His two sons and their wives left for Israel in April, 1975.

Most Intensive Hebrew Course in Only 10 Hours a Week

The American Ulpan, Israel's largest (over 35,000 alumni) private language school, is opening intensive summer classes on July 17 in Jerusalem, Tel Aviv and Haifa. The ulpan uses the exclusive "Fluent Biblical and Modern Hebrew" series. This new series was created especially for English speakers. Students learn by the most sophisticated linguistic method yet devised to read both with (the Bible) and without (newspapers) vowel signs and to speak colloquial Israeli Hebrew. Complete translations are provided. The authors, Robert Goldfarb and David Bivlin, state that monolingual English speakers will learn 2½ times more in only 10 lessons per week than in 29 lessons per weeks at a full-time residential ulpan.

Yael Avi-Yonah Goldfarb, illustrator, with authors Robert Goldfarb and David Bivlin.

Regular classes at all levels study two 50-min. lessons twice each week throughout the year. Reception hours are from 4.00-8.00 p.m. every day. In Jerusalem, the American Ulpan is located at 1 Rehov Shalom, Zion Square; in Tel Aviv at 158 Rehov Dizengoff; in Haifa at 13 Rehov Bialik.

NEWSMAN MEETS ARAB TERRORIST CONVICTS

Gaza: Not one prisoner was tortured

Palestinian terrorist prisoners, permitted for the first time by Israel to meet freely with journalists, have alleged beatings and maltreatment on and immediately after arrest, but none claimed to have undergone actual torture.

The prisoners were speaking last week with the agreement of Israeli prison authorities, but outside their escort — to a cameraman from the news-film agency, Visnews, and myself. We were the first newsmen permitted to participate in such an encounter.

The meeting took place in Gaza prison and I was freely permitted by authorities to choose at random former active members of terrorist groups we wished to speak to.

Israeli authorities have strongly denied the torture allegations and said "The Sunday Times" had declined to have them checked.

I spoke to close to 20 prisoners during the course of a six-hour visit to the jail. This is what they said, followed by the reaction of Israeli officials to whom I relayed the allegations.

Most of the prisoners I spoke to said they were manhandled by the troops who arrested them. Israeli military sources make no bones about admitting that actual arrest can be rough, since many of the suspected are armed, hard-core terrorists and try to shoot their way out of ambush. A good number of those I spoke to said they were beaten to make them talk during subsequent interrogation. Only one prisoner said the alleged beatings had left permanent effects on him and that his hearing had since deteriorated.

The prisoners were delighted to tell their stories to the outside world and said they considered themselves soldiers. One said: "The Israelis too treated me as they considered me — they treated me as an enemy."

Israeli police sources said beatings were against regulations and that the prisoners had every latitude to complain either to courts or to the Red Cross.

"I have personally handled many of these complaints," one source told me at National Police Headquarters. "In 95 per cent of the cases, we found the prisoners were lying. In the other five per cent, we took action against the officers involved. Their punishments are known and have been published in the press."

Some of the prisoners complained that they had been made to stand against walls with hoods over their heads for long periods while questions put to them were punctuated by blows on the back or buttocks. One man said he had been left manacled naked.

"Again, all these treatments are absolutely banned," the police source said. "Certainly, interrogators who sometimes have only a short period to prevent a terror action against civilians, which we know is planned but not for when, are not going to treat men who proudly admit to being killers to VIP treatment."

"But torturing is just not our system, it's theirs. We have a case where one of their fellow Arabs, suspected of collaborating with us, was slowly roasted over an open fire to make him talk," the source said.

The most serious charges were levelled by Dr. Mohammed Rashad Musmar, who unlike the other prisoners does not consider himself an active participant in a war and feels his eight-year sentence is unjustified. Dr. Musmar, in his mid-40s, is considerably older and better educated than most of the other prisoners.

Dr. Musmar, a Gaza surgeon, was the only prisoner complaining of maltreatment who agreed to be identified in this story. He further agreed, at my suggestion, to outline his allegations to Israeli officers present, adding: "I am fair, there are no reprisals to be feared here."

Dr. Musmar was first arrested for terrorist activities in 1971. He was released after two years but later was tried a second time on similar charges. He was charged with illegal possession of arms and hiding three terrorists under his house; and was sentenced to eight years in prison. Dr. Musmar gave the following account in the prison director's office, seated face-to-face with an Israeli captain who often attends prisoner interrogations:

"On the first occasion I was arrested, in 1971, questioning took a long time, about four months. I was first questioned here in Gaza, then in Sarafand, then in Ashkelon, back here to Gaza and finally to Jalama. It was in Jalama that I was badly maltreated. I was beaten, stripped."

Earlier, Dr. Musmar told me that women members of his family had been slapped to make him talk. When I asked him about tortures such as those outlined in "The Sunday Times," Dr. Musmar said: "To me, nothing more happened than what I have described."

Much of our questioning of Dr. Musmar and the other prisoners dealt with what the British newspaper had called techniques which placed Israeli practice well into the realm of torture. These included sexual assaults and electric shocks.

Despite repeated questions on this, the only mention I heard of sexual assaults was of cases of rape between male non-security prisoners.

All the prisoners said they had not been tortured by electricity.

When I asked if he knew of any "third degree" (severe torture), Dr. Musmar replied: "I do not know...but I think that interrogations with maltreatment and severe beatings are almost always present."

Accusations of such treatments were made by Gaza residents at the height of the active terrorist campaign in the Gaza Strip from 1969 to 1971. Several Israeli officers were discreetly court-martialled then.

The Gaza Strip has been generally calm since. The last terrorist incident was nearly 10 months ago.

Dr. Musmar said the interrogators he encountered at the time were difficult to identify since they used Arabic nicknames among themselves.

(The second part of this report, dealing with prison conditions, will appear in Sunday's paper.)

Third arrest in exam leak case

Jerusalem Post Reporter

A Petah Tikva man was arrested at midnight on Wednesday on suspicion of being involved in the circulation of a mathematics bagrut (maturational) examination on the black market.

The man, 25, was tracked down on the basis of testimony from three girls in Jerusalem who received the exam from a friend.

The suspect, who is the third person to be detained in connection with the scandal, said he had "found the exam in the Petah Tikva market." The two other detainees are Hama Harati, an employee of the Education Ministry's examinations division, and a 17-year-old boy.

Although the Ministry and police have not reported evidence of other stolen examinations, Education and Culture Minister Zevulun Hammer told the Knesset on Wednesday that alternative exams were also being written for Bible and English.

This morning about 30,000 students in this secular street will take an alternative Bible exam — printed on green paper, to prevent confusion with the original questionnaire. (Itim)

U.S. wants drug pedlar extradited

Attorney-General Gavriel Bach

has asked the Jerusalem District Court to order the arrest of an Israeli citizen who escaped from an American prison in 1976 while serving a five-year sentence for drug peddling, and whose extradition has been requested by the U.S. Government.

Nuriel Nurieli was convicted in New York in March 1976 on a charge of conspiring with nine others to import and distribute in the U.S. large quantities of cocaine and hashish. He was sent to a Federal prison, but managed to escape after serving just five months of his term, turning up in Israel in May this year.

The extradition request, which was signed by the U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, noted that Nurieli is required to face a charge filed against him in Springfield, Illinois. The request has not yet been discussed by the Jerusalem District Court, but the Attorney-General said Wednesday that he had asked that Nurieli be detained while the extradition process is being completed in view of the serious nature of his crime and the fact that he is an escaped convict. ## Zuabi alleges 'corruption' in Nazareth

Jerusalem Post Knesset Reporter

Former Nazareth Mayor Seif-edin Zuabi, M.K. (Alignment-affiliated Arab list) Wednesday tabled a motion in the Knesset calling for a thorough investigation of what he alleged was, the corruption and politicization rampant in the city's administration.

A second urgent motion was tabled by the city's mayor, Tawfik Zayyad ("Democratic Front for Peace and Equality"), demanding that the House deal with what he alleged is, the systematic discrimination, especially regarding fiscal matters practised against Nazareth and the rest of the country's half-million Arabs by various officials. Zayyad singled out in particular Northern District Representative Yisrael Koenig and his ministerial chiefs.

In his reply, Interior Minister Yosef Burg said there was a vast gap between the facts and the picture painted by Zayyad, and the Ministry will present a fully documented reply when the matter is discussed in committee.

Both motions were referred to the Knesset Interior and Environmental Quality Committee.

Singer Kraus in the courts again

Singer and songwriter Shmuel Kraus was yesterday charged and immediately released on IL$3,000 bail after his arrest on Tuesday for allegedly threatening a policeman with violence.

Kraus was arrested on Tuesday night on the way back from a film-shooting location in Jerusalem. While he was driving along a Jerusalem street, his car broke down and a friend, who was driving another car, started to tow him. A policeman turned up at the scene and explained to the singer that improvised towing is forbidden by law. When the policeman stood before Kraus' car to prevent him from driving away, the singer told him to "move, or I'll finish you off," the prosecution alleges.

Kraus has a police record for various offences of drugs and violence. (Itim)

BBC: British soldiers racing to guard Belize

LONDON (UPI). — Britain is rushing troop reinforcements to her tiny Central American colony of Belize to head off a threatened invasion by Guatemala, radio reports here said yesterday.

The reports carried by the BBC and independent radio news said 20 Royal Air Force VC-10 troop transports carrying troops for Belize passed through Bermuda, another British colony, every two minutes.

The Foreign Office and the Defence Ministry refused confirmation or denial.

"We never comment on reports of operational troop movements," a Defence Ministry spokesman said.

The same reports said a British frigate armed with anti-aircraft missiles is standing by off the coast of Belize.

Belize, the former British Honduras, has a population of 125,000, mostly blacks. It is Britain's last remaining colonial possession on the American continent.

The colony wants independence from Britain. But neighbouring Guatemala has contended for nearly 150 years that the territory should belong to it.

Belize has said she wants independence only after settlement of the dispute with Guatemala and only with effective guarantees by Britain against a Guatemalan invasion after a British pullout. Britain is reluctant to give such an open-ended guarantee.

Foreign Office Minister of State Ted Roup flew to Washington on Tuesday and began a new round of talks with Guatemalan Foreign Minister Adolfo Molina Orantes. Belize Premier George Price also took part.

U.S. officials said it would be "miraculous" if the two countries reached a solution during their Washington meetings. They said the best that could be expected is agreement on a date for further negotiations.

Asked about reports from Belize that Guatemala is mobilizing troops and Great Britain beefing up its forces there, the officials said the next three days are critical. But they declined to speculate as to what could happen in the area.

They also said the U.S. role has been limited to talking to both sides to prevent the situation from spiralling out of control.

Workers, around twice the present wage.

Labour is basing much of its plans for economic recovery on achieving a third year for its wage restraint policies. Callaghan has said a third year is vital if inflation, currently running at 17.1 per cent a year, is to be reduced.

Bargaining between the government and leaders of the Trades Union Congress, which represents most unions, to try to thrash out terms for a third year of pay restraint is reported to have been tough. The TUC is fighting to ease the present restrictions on wage rises while the government is fighting to retain enough of the policy's teeth to tackle inflation.

But as the government is trying to rein in the TUC on the one hand, political and economic observers here were arguing on Wednesday that the Liberals give the distinct impression that they would not wish to share the inevitable unpopularity that would be the lot of a Labour government.

The TGW's vote, held at their annual convention on the Isle of Man, comes on the heels of the Trades Union Congress's 262,000-member National Union of Mineworkers, who are demanding up to £135 (about IL2,300) a week for top-paid coal-face workers, around twice the present wage.

Rhodesia talks stall

LUSAKA, Zambia (AP). — Talks between the Anglo-American negotiation team and nationalist Patriotic Front leaders ended in deadlock yesterday because of differences of approach to a Rhodesian settlement.

Joshua Nkomo, co-leader of the Patriotic Front, said after a two-hour meeting: "We cannot agree to the British government's latest proposals to hold a constitutional conference until the British government has been successful in removing the causes of war in Rhodesia."

Nkomo said he told John Graham, a British senior envoy, and Stephen Low, the U.S. ambassador to Zambia, that in order to remove the causes of the war in Rhodesia, Britain should "visibly indicate that they are prepared to hand over power to the Patriotic Front."

No agreement could be reached with the Anglo-American team because of "certain differences of approach" to the Rhodesia question, Nkomo said.

Nkomo said verbal agreement was reached on certain aspects of the new Anglo-American proposal for the Rhodesian constitutional talks leading to majority rule.

But, Nkomo said, what is important now is to grant the oppressed masses in Rhodesia their independence.

He said "a beautiful constitution without independence" was useless. The U.S. and Britain favour having these rights guaranteed in writing in a constitution before independence.

Graham and Low left yesterday afternoon for Salisbury for talks with Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith.

Muhammad Hanef Ramay, former Chief Minister of Punjab province and a bitter critic of Bhutto, also said in a press statement after his release from prison yesterday that there should be an open trial of Bhutto and "his accomplices" for what he called the rigging of national elections in March and other misdeeds.

Bhutto is being held in what the army describes as temporary protective custody at Murree, a hill resort near the Kashmir border. Most of Pakistan's principal opposition leaders are also being held in government guest houses at Murree.

The newspaper "Nawa Waqt" yesterday said Bhutto had been informed of the military takeover a few minutes before 2 a.m. on Tuesday.

Mauritanian envoy shot in Paris

PARIS (UPI). — Mauritania's ambassador to France was shot and seriously wounded by two young gunmen outside his Paris home yesterday 10 days after French police withdrew a protective maximum security service around his home.

Ambassador Ahmed Ould Ghanahallah, 35, was hit by three bullets fired from close range through the rear window of his car on Avenue Malakoff as he was leaving home for the embassy.

A lone city policeman had no time to intervene in the lightning attack at 10 a.m. on the busy street. The two gunmen, both about 25, vanished into the morning crowd.

Rushed to the American Hospital by his chauffeur, the ambassador underwent surgery. Hospital officials said he was out of danger.

The shooting immediately sparked a controversy as to who was responsible for the attack.

An anonymous woman telephoned Agence France Presse news agency asserting the attack was carried out by the "Mustapha el Walli Sayed International Brigades." Said was the secretary general of the Polisario Front guerrillas fighting against Mauritania's and Morocco's annexation of the former Spanish Sahara.

Sayed was killed in June, 1976 during a Polisario attack on Nouakchott, the Mauritanian capital.

In Algiers, the Polisario Front immediately condemned the attack and charged the assassination attempt was engineered by Moroccan secret services.

It said, "This provocation is vainly trying to discredit our people's struggle and to sow confusion. It is well known that Paris has always been chosen by the Moroccan intelligence services and their accomplices for the execution of similar tasks."

The statement appeared to be referring to the unsolved 1968 Paris murder of Moroccan opposition leader Ahmed Ben Barka by Moroccan secret services with the help of some French police officers.

The attack on the envoy stepped up tension between Morocco and Mauritania on the one hand and Algeria, the country helping the Polisario guerrillas, on the other hand.

Rightist Turks to restore old coalition

ANKARA (UPI). — Premier-designate Suleyman Demirel announced agreement in principle yesterday to reconstructing the right-wing coalition that ruled Turkey for two years before the June 5 general elections.

Demirel, 52, leader of the conservative Justice Party, made the announcement after meeting with Necmettin Erbakan, leader of the pro-Muslim National Salvation Party, which holds the balance of power in the newly elected National Assembly.

Demirel, who has served three previous terms as premier, had already been assured of the support of the neo-fascist National Action Party.

The three parties hold a total of 229 seats in the 450-member assembly.

They joined forces on Sunday to defeat the short-lived moderately leftist minority government of Necmettin Erbakan.

Following the vote, President Fahri Koruturk asked Demirel to form a government.

'Urban terrorist' arrested by KGB

MOSCOW. — The KGB announced yesterday that they have arrested a man for setting off an explosion in Moscow, a rare disclosure of urban terrorism in the Soviet Union.

The announcement transmitted by Tass news agency, said the bomb exploded on June 11 in a taxicab outside the Sovetskaya Hotel, which is on a main thoroughfare outside the city's center.

Tass said the arrested man, who was not identified, confessed responsibility for the explosion and blamed it on "low motives."

The explosion at the Sovetskaya, where many Westerners stay on business trips, had not been reported in the Soviet press.

On Wednesday, meanwhile, Malva Landau, a member of a Moscow-based Helsinki Monitoring Panel, left on Wednesday to begin her sentence of two years' exile in a remote area of eastern Siberia, dissent sources reported.

Mrs. Landau, 38, a noted geologist, was sentenced to the term in internal exile on May 31 after being found guilty of damaging state and private property by setting fire to her own apartment.

lawed tests in the atmosphere many years ago, all U.S. nuclear tests have been conducted deep underground, where the neutron bomb's lethal burst of radiation would be contained by thousands of metres of earth.

Although the powerful burst of radiation kills or fatally injures human beings in the immediate area — dosing those within 800 metres with up to 8,000 times the radiation in a medical X-ray — the source said troops could move into the blast site relatively soon after the explosion, because neutron radiation does not linger long, unlike some other forms.

Opponents argue it will threaten disarmament talks with the USSR and make nuclear warfare more likely by making some nuclear explosions less devastating.

Proponents say it is needed as a tactical battlefield weapon to fight larger Communist ground forces, and as a method of using advanced weapons against an enemy without destroying whole cities.

The Energy Research and Development Administration (ERDA), which oversees the activities of the Atomic Energy Commission, has reported after a recent blast that no radiation escaped into the atmosphere.

An ERDA spokesman would neither confirm nor deny the report that the neutron weapon had been tested.

The sources said the force of a neutron bomb explosion would be low by nuclear standards, although if exploded above ground it would produce the characteristic mushroom cloud and cause some blast damage to buildings near the explosion.

"But the weapon would have a lower yield (of explosive force) than most nuclear weapons and no fallout. When the weapon goes off, it has a prompt release of neutrons, any nuclear weapon, but the release is enhanced," they said.

U.S. Neutron bomb already tested

LAS VEGAS (UPI). — The neutron bomb already has been exploded under the Nevada desert, according to sources close to the U.S. nuclear weapons testing programme.

At least one neutron bomb has been detonated at the Nevada test site 113 miles north of Las Vegas, the sources confirmed late on Wednesday.

One expert familiar with the programme declined to say whether there had been more than one test, or how long testing of the bomb has been under way.

The White House said Wednesday that President Carter plans to decide in mid-August whether to go ahead with production of the radiation warhead, centre of a dispute in Congress.

A dozen or more nuclear warheads a year are explored at the test site, and the explosions have become almost routine in the highly populated desert area.

Tribal-chief image charms Idi Amin's fellow Africans

LIBREVILLE, Gabon. — The Organization of African Unity (OAU) summit conference, just ended here, provided yet another insight into the strange fascination "exercised by Ugandan President Idi Amin on his fellow African leaders."

From beginning to end of the four-day conference of African chiefs of state, his hulking, bearded presence never failed to elicit laughter or applause from the continent's assembled elite.

Even Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda, a respected humanitarian who has never hidden his contempt for Amin's antics, remained strangely silent when newsmen asked him why he had not denounced the Ugandan leader here.

(But that matter, no one bothered to condemn wholesale atrocities said to have taken place in Sekou Toure's Guinea.)

The delegates here know perfectly well that the modern world does not — and should not — tolerate Amin's bloodthirsty clowning.

But for many Africans, Amin is the perfect model of the neo-colonial African tribal leader — flamboyant, feared, ruthless, but always respected.

Moreover, Amin's highly professional manipulation of the Western press, which somewhat sickeningly relishes his every antic, rubs off on his fellow African leaders. For better or worse, Amin has become the best known African, bar none, and has put Africa on the world map.

Left unsaid, moreover, is the deep-seated African inferiority complex which tolerates the double standard of ritually denouncing repression by White minority regimes while turning a blind eye to the systematic violation of human rights carried on in most Black African countries.

The truth is that almost all leaders of independent Africa are frightened men haunted by the continent's capacity for coups. In their hearts, they know they either have resorted to the most draconian methods, or would not hesitate to do so at the slightest provocation, to remain on their uneasy throne.

Preventive detention, censorship, persecution of dissidents, and worse have become such common currency that it is easier to draw up the handful of African countries which manage to respect some, if not necessarily many, basic human rights, than to list those who flout them.

The unspoken fear among the continent's more thoughtful and decent citizens is that Africa had best be used to more Idi Amin.

The men and women in the OAU conference hall are full-time participants in the African power game — and this may explain their indulgence for one of their own. (Washington Post News Service)

South Africa FM slams race-sex laws

PRETORIA (AP). — Foreign Minister R.F. "Piik" Botha has urged the repeal of laws which prohibit sexual relations and marriage across the colour line in racially divided South Africa.

The outspoken foreign minister was siding with Agriculture Minister Hendrik Schoeman, who earlier this week issued the same appeal for abolishing laws known as the Immorality Act and the Mixed Marriages Act.

"My personal opinion is that these laws are not necessary for our survival," Botha said in an impromptu published yesterday. His office here confirmed the report as accurate.

Laws against interracial sex in South Africa date back to the Immorality Act of 1927, which forbade sexual intercourse between Whites and Blacks. It was amended in 1950 to outlaw any sexual relations between the races.

The Prohibition of Mixed Marriages Act of 1949, amended in 1968, bans marriages between Whites and other races in South Africa.

Between July, 1975 and June, 1976 there were at least 417 cases of sexual intercourse between Whites and Blacks investigated under the Immorality Act, according to a recent report in parliament.

Prime Minister John Vorster earlier this year said in an interview that repealing the two laws "would not work out."

In another development, M. Steyn, a South African Supreme court judge, has been appointed Administrator-General of Botswana, Vorster's office said yesterday.

The appointment of the 57-year-old lawyer to the newly created post is the first step by South Africa to follow a partial agreement for the disputed territory worked out by Western Powers and the South African government during several meetings since April.

daughter, thy manservant, nor thy maid-servant, nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates." Not a word about automobiles. A Jewish Encyclopedia explains: "The prohibition of labour on the Sabbath enacted in the Torah led in subsequent times to far-reaching and detailed discussions as to the concept and extent of the prohibited forms and kinds of work and to a diffuse network of casuistry." The Encyclopedia explains the purpose of the Jewish Sabbath as being "to consecrate and make its observance happy; to allow the divine peace to enter the human heart and to purify the will morally in keeping with the basic nature of the Jewish religion." It is hard to believe that a Jew, a Jew, throwing stones and demonstrating religiously are calculated to attain these objectives. It may be argued that the secular should refrain from travel on Saturdays so as not to offend the susceptibilities of their religious fellow-Israelis. There is much force in this contention. Of course, since ours is a multi-faceted state, we should also refrain from travel on Fridays, out of respect for the sensitivities of our Moslem brethren. On Sundays, we should stay put, so as not to harrow the feelings of Christians. Mondays should be a no travel day because of the Buddhists. Tuesday motoring will shock the Confucians. I am vague about the views of the Bahais, but no doubt they detest travel on Wednesdays. Speaking for the athletes and agnostics, we would like Thursday to be a day of rest. If all travel were banned in this way, the spiritual gain would be almost as great as the material, which would be boundless, due to the saving in energy. We would have our roads free for pedestrians, just as they were four thousand years ago. And we would revert to living as our ancestors did in those halcyon days. WHEN I READ the programme for Monday night, my heart sank — I suspected that the heavy hand of Geula Cohen had fallen on the programming department. Morasha — questions and answers about Halacha. "You Were There" — the debate about the Uganda offer by Joseph Chamberlain in 1903. Leonard Bernstein's "Kaddish No. 3" to round up a happy-go-lucky evening's entertainment. The night for this tough diet was chosen with fiendish skill, because Jordan promised to be even duller, with several hours devoted to the celebrations in the Zeira district of King Hussein's silver jubilee. Much to my surprise, the two main items proved to be absorbingly interesting. Hanna Zemer handled the Uganda project with her usual skill, firmness and tact; she kept the show going at surprising speed. Amos Gilon didn't look much like Theodore Herzl, but he spoke very much like him. Ya'akov Tsaur, that most tolerant of men, seemed to enjoy being an obstinate and intractable Ussishkin; Yigal Eliaz breathed with the fire of the young Weizmann; Gabi Sheffer was that rather shallow British intellectual, Israel Zangwill. Maybe next time Hanna will dress her actors in fancy dress. This will provide more fun for both them and us. The merits of the argument about whether the Jews should have accepted a tract of land in East Africa as a "station on the way to Zion," a colony before they had a mother country, as Herzl put it, are almost impossible to evaluate because of hindsight. True, 30 years later the terrible calamities feared by Herzl did overwhelm the Jews of Europe, but is it very doubtful whether many of those millions would have gone to Uganda or Kenya decades before they went to the extermination camps. Would we have been better off fighting Kenya and Kilimanjaro, Idi Amin and the Ugandans, as well as the Arabs? One must doubt it. The woman on the programme who said that there was nobody there in that fertile land, except Africans, reminded me of Tom Sawyer's Aunt Sally, who told that a river-boat had blown a cylinder head, asked Buck Finn if anybody was hurt. He answered, "No'm. Killed a nigger." "Well, its lucky," said this genuinely kindly woman, "because sometimes people do get hurt." Herzl's troubles with his fellow-Zionists reminded me of a plea made by an American Jewish leader, for whom I have great respect and affection, that we should not stick knives into the back of Begin but should give him a chance. For the life of me I cannot see why Begin should have a clearer back than Herzl, Weizmann, Ben-Gurion, Sharett, Kishkol and Rabin. Our only leader with a knifeless back was Golda. I wonder why. Then came "Kaddish," magnificently conducted, played, sung and spoken by all concerned, a real major triumph. So my criticism of the programme was still. But I hope that Television House does not intend to dedicate all future Mondays to such programming.

THE SUMMER programmes promise well. It is certainly going to be interesting, having Yaron London on three times a week with "Behind the Headlines." "Kojak," "Rich Man, Poor Man" and "The Brothers" are back. Sinners who watch Jordan are being punished for their lack of patriotism: we are getting Kojaks and Jordachs that we have seen long since. Without suggesting that we deserve a better fate, equidistant TV House for once jump the gun on the opposition, and begin with Kojaks that Jordanians have not yet seen? I do not go overboard about most of our light musical entertainments, but I must mention Tuesday night's Berthold Brecht programme. Zaharia and Shoshick, and Ark Lavie were out of this world. Let's have more of the same.

SOMEBODY told me that Radio B was running a remarkable series of programmes on unmarried mothers on Monday nights, so greatly daring I passed up Uri Zohar. And my informant was correct; it was certainly a programme worth hearing. One would hardly have thought that in this day and age being an unmarried mother would carry such a stigma, but it seems that it does, except on the kibbutz. The programme about the difficulties of raising a child alone, and of trying to cope with its questions about the missing father, was both poignant and dramatic. So was the confrontation between an unmarried mother of a previous generation and one of today. There was a painful truth to it all. Yet the older mother did say that the happiest moment of her life was when the child was born, and she certainly had no regrets about what she had done.

From child actor to adult star

By CATHERINE ROSENHEIMER

Burstyn as Hershele

THE STAR of the new movie "Hershele," Mike Burstyn, is one of those rare child actors to have survived on the stage until the ripe old age of 32. When we met recently, he proudly told me that he was celebrating his 25th year in show business. He is also a rarity in Israeli entertainment circles in being one of the few American-born actors to have succeeded in breaking into the closed clique of Hebrew films, theatre and light entertainment. Mike was virtually born into the theatre — the Yiddish theatre of New York's Second Avenue, where his parents were well known old-time Yiddish music hall personalities. At the age of seven, he and his twin sister (a ventriloquist) appeared with their parents as "The Burstyn Family" and most of his childhood was spent on the road, touring North and South America, Canada, Europe and South Africa.

In his teens, Mike spent a year in an Israeli high school, whilst the family were making appearances here. "In those days, an American newcomer was a rarity — I had a lot of trouble with the kids in school. They laughed at my Yiddish accent in Hebrew, and even more at my American clothes." When he decided to stay here, and to try to make a career, he had more difficulties. By that time his Hebrew was fluent — but he didn't "fit" into the show business clique. He hadn't been in the same youth movements as all the others, nor was he a product of the army entertainment troupes — the nursery and exclusive "club" of most local actors and entertainers. His first big break came with the local production of "The Megilla of Ikkim Manger," a Yiddish musical for which he was eminently well qualified, and in which he landed a leading role. The longest-running Israeli production ever in those pre-"Fiddler on the Roof" days, it also took him to Broadway, and established him firmly in his career in Israel. "There are times when I feel a little guilty of having deserted my parents, but it was something I had to do, to prove that I could establish myself in my own right. My sister also stopped appearing with them when she married, and although they still work sometimes, my parents have a difficult time these days, with the Yiddish theatre of the kind they knew in a decline. I think they are happy about my success — but there are some feelings of resentment." As a singer, Mike's first big success here was in 1967 when his recent sequel "Kuni Lemel in Tel Aviv," where he played the part of a traditional Jewish folk hero. Between the two Kuni Lemel films, he took a break from Israel, "sitting around in Los Angeles, hoping to get into Hollywood." He got some small parts, among them an appearance in the American T.V. production of "QB VII"; his Israeli wife studied cinema costume design and their two sons were born during that period. Two years ago, his wife had to fly back to Israel for family reasons. Mike decided to give up waiting for Hollywood to "discover" him, and joined his family. "Since then, I have been so busy that I haven't even had the time to sell my flat or my car in Los Angeles." He plunged into work on the second Kuni Lemel film and, being a tri-lingual, professional entertainer able to ad-lib jokes in English, Hebrew and Yiddish, found himself much in demand in a variety of work, from local T.V. panel games to co-hosting the Merv Griffin American talk show made in Israel recently, and numerous comper and singing appearances both here and abroad.

Mike's varied talents have earned him comparison with Danny Kaye. In reality, he is an adaptable and businesslike young man with natural charm. He can switch in seconds from an Israeli folk singer to an ethnic Jewish acting role, or, with equal ease, become a slick, wise cracking dinner-jacketed comper at an elegant function. His chutzpa-spiced humour in delivered gently enough to elicit laughs, without being offensive. In Mike's most recent film, released at the end of June, he plays Hershele, a Russian musician who happens to be Israel's three millionth immigrant. It is a musical comedy, with some authentic aspects of Israeli life thrown in. Many of the characters and situations are true and stereotyped, but designed as a vehicle for Burstyn himself. As such, it successfully provides an hour-and-a-half of family entertainment. Should anyone doubt the authenticity of the story itself... Mike tells me that, shortly after the film's release, he was introduced to a "real" Hershele; a young Russian immigrant who, unbeknown to the film's scriptwriters Joel Silberg and David Gurfinkel (also the director and cameraman respectively), is alive and well and living in Ofakim where he has set up a local youth orchestra. Perhaps by now he may even have enlisted some Vietnamese musicians too.

Campus in the desert

By SHOSHANA LESSER
Jerusalem Post Reporter

REFIDIM. — The plane that once flew Prime Minister Levi Eshkol around Africa now houses a library in the heart of the Sinai Desert. The grounded plane sits in the force base at Refidim, its interior providing a relaxation from the military scenery around. Curtains decorate the windows, armchairs and round tables have replaced rows of passenger seats. The instrument panel in the cockpit has been pulled out and replaced with shelves of books. The library is part of a nine-month-old project in which Bar-Ilan University has made academic courses available to army personnel in Sinai. Lecturers fly down to provide courses in anthropology, Jewish history, political studies and sociology. Soldiers study on a regular basis, taking exams like ordinary students. Bar-Ilan's "campus on base" is a far cry from the multi-storey buildings and well-trimmed flower beds of the mother-campus in Ramat Gan. The classrooms are a couple of motobus huts, the view a barren waste of yellow stones and grit. Though some 60 soldiers are enrolled in courses, they cannot always attend. As soon as there is an alert, they must dash back to their posts. And even if there isn't one, they admit that concentrating in class after a day's training in desert heat requires considerable effort.

But despite the difficulties, more have enrolled for next year's courses than this year's. A recent student soldier was so enthusiastic that he travelled nearly two hours "desert-wise" to attend lectures. However, it was not easy to establish academic life on a base where there are two film shows an evening and a multitude of light entertainment performances available. An enterprising and stubborn commander decided that his men "should not live on bread alone." He cut the number of films to three a week, reduced shows and instead provided cultural activities such as photography, handicrafts and music appreciation clubs. The star attraction he planned was Bar-Ilan's courses which would earn soldiers regular credits towards a degree.

His men were not too keen on this sudden influx of "intellect" into what had been a very material life. They preferred to "wind down" in the evenings, rather than apply their minds to serious activities.

As for the disused plane, the officers wanted to turn it into a discotheque while the educationally-minded commander had it earmarked for a library.

The officers won. But while they were fitting out the inside, an electrical fault set the entire fuselage alight. "You see," said the commander, "it was meant to be a library." The others were convinced.

Thankful that the scarred and blackened plane was still repairable, they hung the following Biblical quotation by the entrance (Exodus 3, 2.)

"...and he looked and behold the bush burned with fire, and the bush was not consumed."

Unheralded and unsung

BIBLICAL BYWAYS / Louis L. Rabinowitz

GENEALOGICAL lists make dry reading, and the list in the 26th chapter of Numbers, which is included in the portion read tomorrow, is among the most boring. It gives the second census of the Children of Israel, some 38 years after the previous one, and with one single exception no biographical details are given about any of the persons mentioned.

The exception refers to the two accomplices of Korach-Dathan and Abiram — of whom it is recorded, "they are the Dathan and Abiram, the elect of the congregation who strove... against the Lord" and the dire punishment which overtook them, so that "they became a sign." But it is not with these two traditional malcontents that this column deals but with one who appears just as a name and no more. He is Nemuel.

Who was Nemuel? He was none other than the brother of Dathan and Abiram, the two arch conspirators and trouble makers. We know literally nothing about him, although apparently he was the eldest of the three brothers. He was not of "the elect of the congregation" as were his brothers, and one is almost tempted to regard him as a schlemiel, with none of the arrogance, ambition or self-assertiveness which characterized his two younger brothers.

He was a humble, undistinguished loyal follower of Moses. As far as we know he never questioned or doubted the validity of the divine commandments. But when the conquest of the Land took place and the descendants of Eliab the father entered into their inheritance, it was Nemuel alone who came into his inheritance, bore children and assured the continuity and survival of the Jewish people.

I confess to a great affection for this ordinary, humble member of what is called amcha, the unknown musket-bearer, always in the shadows. He never gains fame or notoriety, and in his death as in his life he is virtually anonymous. Not for him a niche in the hall of fame. He remains insignificant, unheralded and unsung. But he is the backbone of the people, those who assure its continuity throughout the ages.

That's right! You can win an unforgettable trip — a flight to Disneyland or bicycles, cameras, transistor radios, soccer balls, records, colorful stickers for your books.

Remember! Everyone wins and it's so easy.

Cut out the word "Kremli" from 7 Kremli lids Chocolate, Caramel or Vanilla, put them in an envelope... write your full name, address and age — and send it to P.O. Box 33150 Tel-Aviv. You will receive 6 beautiful colored stickers immediately. You also automatically take part in the big prize draw (including the first prize to Disneyland). The more envelopes you send — the bigger your chances to win! The draw will be held in the presence of Tnuva representatives and under the supervision of a lawyer and a public accountant. Tnuva workers and Arieli advertising employees are forbidden to participate in the contest.

Partition for South Africa

Veteran politician David Hacoen, who has been a diplomat and a Member of Knesset among his varied and often colourful activities, recently returned from a visit to South Africa. He sums up here his views on one of the Republic's fundamental problems.

THE LAWS of apartheid introduced by the descendants of the white settlers seem quite incomprehensible to the non-South African. The first settlers, who arrived from Europe at the beginning of the 17th century, were not pirates or adventurers. On the contrary, they were either Dutch East India Company or French Huguenots fleeing religious persecution. They were, in fact, staunch adherents of the Bible and loyal to its values.

Yet when they gradually established a new homeland for themselves they treated the black people living among them with violence and contempt. They had no hesitation in enslaving them or taking their land by conquest or fraud.

In the 300 years after the first white settlers arrived, Europe underwent many stages of political and social revolution. But the waves of the French Revolution failed to reach the southern end of Africa and later egalitarian and democratic movements likewise failed to reach so far.

Today the four million South African whites have attained one of the highest standards of living in the world. Yet they lack a basic concern for the 18 million natives who have — by their labour in field and mine — contributed so greatly to the wealth of their employers.

The injustice of the apartheid regime has become all the more glaring with the achievement of independence by all the other peoples of black Africa over the past 20 years. With 200 million black people enjoying complete equality in the family of nations, the complete abolition of the apartheid laws should be a pressing moral duty. However, the establishment of complete political equality in South Africa between white and black, when the latter outnumber the former by five to one, is another matter, the granting of equal democratic rights to both would mean the end of the white minority, and be a blow to all the inhabitants.

It is unacceptable that the white minority be left to the mercies of the black African majority, particularly now that we know how things have shaped up in independent black Africa; and most notably the activities of Idi Amin.

Were the South African authorities to introduce full democratic equality, the black majority would naturally identify with their brothers elsewhere in Africa and, incited by the latter, would take drastic parliamentary means to undermine the position of the whites and bring disaster upon the country. No one in his right mind could urge the South African government to adopt such a course.

Though I have no right to offer advice, after so brief a stay in South Africa, I nevertheless venture to suggest what seems to me the only way of solving the problem of democratic equality. This would be to set up separate states for each of the two communities, white and black, within the territory of the present Republic.

The country would be partitioned into two states in just proportion to the numbers of whites and blacks, each of which would then be under its own rule, democratic or otherwise as the inhabitants may wish. But even before such a surgical operation the South African government should abolish the apartheid restrictions and grant democratic equality to the two and a half million Asians and Coloureds. Many of the latter are in fact the direct descendants of people who came into the world nine months after the arrival of the first European immigrants three centuries ago, or after each of the following waves of immigration. The former are Indian and other immigrants who came to Africa when it was under British rule, in ways that paralleled those of the whites. These people, 2.5 million of them, are entitled to equality, with the whites, as they have no tribal territory on which to set up an independent state.

Such a revolution in the status of the Coloureds and Asians could lead either to their assimilation into South African society and into the existing democratic parties or to the creation of new parties. This transition would increase the population of what remained of South Africa after the removal of the native African states and bring it up to about 25 per cent of the present figure.

The Republic of South Africa is today a territory of about 1.2m. sq. km., much of it with a wonderful climate, and rich in agricultural and mining resources. The establishment of independent states for the black tribes would, I am convinced, serve as a great challenge to them. Each would be encouraged to make enormous efforts to develop the resources of its own territory, independent of foreign tutelage.

SURGERY of this kind cannot be done in a single day or a single year. It will take great efforts especially by those directly affected, plus the mediation and practical help of every state in the civilized world, including Africa. It involves the partition of a rich and developed country, and will require economic and political guidance afterwards.

The process would be very complicated. It would start with international efforts to convince the ruling whites to lend a hand to this enormous transformation. It would involve active international guidance for the new black states, as compensation for their exploitation over the centuries and for the failure to educate them in self-government. But a mutual concern for peace, together with the economic links between all the states occupying the partitioned territory of the present South Africa, would lead to an economic upsurge.

An influx of perhaps more than a million foreign workers from these new black states to white South Africa on contracts for jobs at equal pay would pose no problem other than the usual ones that come up between management and unions. And the wealth that would accrue from such fair wages would circulate through the financial bloodstream of the country.

The foreign workers, who would remain citizens of their own countries (like the millions of guest-workers in Europe) would not be entitled to political rights — other than their work permits — in the host country, and thus would not disturb its racial balance.

This programme may sound like a utopian fantasy, but it can be done. It is a solution that will demand much patience and goodwill, but it is feasible. And I am certain that it is preferable in many ways to the pressures, embargoes and boycotts now practised against South Africa, which have no more effect than to perpetuate today's unhappy situation, and add fuel to Communist propaganda.

Finally, let me add a few lines about Israel-South African relations, in the light of the calls made for Israel to reduce its trade and other relations with Pretoria. The tangled problem of South Africa will not be solved by waving a magic wand or hidden any more than it will through terror, tanks or airplanes. Let us not forget that we here in Israel face problems which others — whether honestly or through intentional dishonesty — choose to regard as similar or parallel to those of South Africa. Because we are angered at surrender to the Arab boycott and at the wilful disregard of our inalienable rights and our efforts to achieve a peace settlement, so must we strive for vigorous international efforts to help and convince South Africa to solve its own problems. We should not let ourselves be misled into mistaken action by extremist propaganda aimed at toppling the Republic of South Africa and leaving in its place a heap of ruins for both white and black.

We must continue to have open trade relations with South Africa, shunning the disguises employed by so many black African states to hide theirs. We should send high-level missions both to increase trade and to open an honest dialogue with South Africa's rulers on the solution of its problems.

We should take this same above-board approach with our friends in the West. Above all we must openly explain our position to the U.S. Government, if it is indeed true that relations between Washington and Pretoria are worsening.

David Hacoen

Consultation of the Church and the Jewish people

CHRISTIAN COMMENT Oikoumenikos

THE CONSULTATION of the Church and the Jewish People of the World Council of Churches which recently met in Jerusalem was significant from the standpoint of its meeting place, its participants and guests, and its thoughtful statement on issues important to Christian-Jewish relations.

This was the first time that the Consultation, which meets biennially, had assembled in Jerusalem. This made it possible for the participants to visit the Patriarchates of the Greek Orthodox, Armenian, and Ethiopian Churches, and the Russian Orthodox and Rumanian Orthodox Missions here. Conversations were held with a wide variety of Christians and Jews in different parts of the country. The host was the Ecumenical Theological Research Fraternity in Israel.

Delegates to the Consultation, from 12 nations, have traditionally come from North America and Europe, but this year a number of African Christian guests were invited to join in exploring relationships between Christians and Jews. The African contribution gave a perspective from those who know Judaism primarily through the Hebrew Scriptures and the New Testament, and had little contact with a living Jewish community. The Africans felt no burden of guilt for the Holocaust because during the same period and earlier, Black people suffered great oppression and dehumanization, largely from the West.

How do Jewish-Christian relations fit into a world-wide perspective? Addressed by Consultation Chairman Kristian Stendahl, Dean of Harvard Divinity School, and Professor D.C. Mulder of Holland focused on this topic. The Consultation is a sub-unit of the World Council's Department on Dialogue with People of Living Faiths and Ideologies, of which Professor Mulder is Chairman.

"The dialogue with the Jews is of a special character because of the unique relationship which exists between the Church and the Jewish People," affirmed the Consultation, recalling previous WCC statements about this, most recently at a WWC-sponsored gathering in Thailand in April.

The Jerusalem Report continues: "To no other people is the Church historically and theologically so intimately bound. It is a fact of history that Christianity has its roots in the Jewish community of the first century. Jesus was a Jew; he and his message cannot be properly understood apart from the early history of the Jewish people. Also the apostles and first disciples were all Jews. The Scriptures of the Early Church were the Scriptures of the Jewish People..."

What common convictions do Christians and Jews share? The Consultation stated: "Both worship God, as the One, who is Creator of all that is, who makes His will known to human beings and relates to them as Father, Teacher, and Redeemer. Both believe that God created men and women in His image; that they are called to be holy; are given stewardship under God over his creation and are accountable to God for the way they exercise this stewardship."

Both share, to a large extent, a common ethic, holding themselves responsible for their fellows, especially for those who are weak, poor, or persecuted. Both have a common hope, looking forward to a renewed creation, where all suffering will be done away with and God's will will be victorious in all realms and in every respect; inspired by this ultimate hope, they are called to work for greater righteousness."

Deep historic differences, however, are not to be glossed over. "These divergent interpretations," the Consultation noted, "have led to tension between the communities and hostile attitudes on the part of Christians, especially in the West." Consequently, the delegates reaffirmed their condemnation of anti-Semitism, as did the First Assembly of the World Council of Churches in Amsterdam in 1948, calling it "sin against God and man." In order to eradicate anti-Semitism, the Consultation asserted, "it is necessary that Christians face honestly their tragic history with regard to the Jews — a history which includes events like the Crusades, the Inquisition, and the Holocaust."

There was placed on traditional convictions which have furthered anti-Semitic stances and attitudes on the part of Christians, and the need of efforts to present Judaism in a positive way. "The correction of dangerous trends in theology and biblical interpretation, important as this is for combating anti-Semitism," added the Consultation, "is no substitute for Christians meeting Jews and understanding them in their distinctiveness as Jews."

Proselytism both in its gross and its more refined forms was rejected in the strongest terms, as it has been in the past by the WCC. Recognizing that we live in a world of religious pluralism, it is vital that we treat with respect those who differ from us, and that we strongly support religious liberty for all, delegates said.

At the same time, the Consultation, amidst the theological diversity of its participants, struggled with the question of how to define authentic Christian witness.

The WCC has explicitly affirmed the right to existence of the State of Israel on a number of occasions. The Consultation stated, "Our recognition of the State of Israel can be based upon several considerations, but for us it is especially motivated by our respect for the Jews in their identity and self-understanding. For a great majority of Jews there is an indissoluble bond between the people and the Land."

"Our acceptance of the State of Israel should not be misinterpreted as unqualified approval of all which this State does," the report continues. "It also leaves many unresolved questions. We recognize that through the ages the Jews shared this Land with others. Just as we respect the identity and the right of self-determination of the Jews, we respect also the identity and right of the Palestinian Arabs to self-determination. There are still many questions about the ways and means by which a just and durable peace in the Middle East should be achieved and how Christians possibly could play a role of reconciliation."

Proposed guidelines for the churches for inter-religious relations are eventually to be submitted to the Central Committee of the World Council of Churches. The Jerusalem Consultation was an important step in the preparation of a proposal to be presented through the Department on Dialogue with People of Living Faiths and Ideologies. Working groups in North America, Europe, and in the Ecumenical Theological Research Fraternity in Israel, had worked hard on draft proposals to which the Consultation gave consideration. "We are very much aware," said the delegates, "that the differences of opinion among us demand further study."

"Our dealing with these issues will show that in our thinking about Israel and the Jews, very important and vital tenets of our Christian faith are at stake. Is it too much to hope that Christians and Jews may live in creative tension, enriching and encouraging each other, despite the appalling record of the relationship between the two communities over the centuries?"

Correction: In the last Christian Comment column, a typographical error indicated that the increase in the number of Christians in Africa was 21 per cent per annum. This correct figure is 2 1/2 per cent.

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS Yehanan Boehm

Gary Bertini

STARS do not change their constellations, but in the music world, changes are more and more the thing. Gone are the days when a conductor could lead the same orchestra for thirty or forty years — Eugene Ormandy seems to be the last to hold on (his conductorship of the Philadelphia Orchestra dates from 1931, and since 1938 he has been its sole artistic head). Changes in the direction of the world's great orchestras are discussed and written about for months before a decision is announced. Many columns were written when Leonard Bernstein left the New York Philharmonic, and the appointment of Pierre Boulez was opposed by many and defended by few.

Now, after six years, Pierre Boulez has left for Paris to do electronic research, and the search for a star conductor is on again. The decision has fallen in favour of Zubin Mehta who will take over in 1976, when he will leave his kingdom in Los Angeles. (To our great relief, Mehta will stay with the IFO as Musical Adviser). Carl Maria Giulini has agreed to take Mehta's place in Los Angeles. He is an independent enough personality to make his imprint on the programmes and the orchestra.

On our local scene there are also changes looming on the musical horizon.

The Israel Chamber Ensemble has Rudolf Barshai as Musical Director and a new emblem for the occasion: initials "taph-kuph-yod" (for Tishoret Kamerit Israeli) and I.C.O. for its newly acquired status of "Israel Chamber Orchestra."

APPARENTLY, this new name also indicates a new beginning in programme policy and working standards. But why negate the fine past history of the Ensemble and omit Gary Bertini's name from the programme booklet altogether? His association as founder and chief conductor for ten years is nothing to be ashamed of. And it is obvious that the Chamber Orchestra is a continuation in its manpower and management of the Chamber Ensemble. Wishing the old-new group prosperity and success, we also hope that stimulating programming, which was the outstanding contribution of the Ensemble to our music scene, will continue under the new direction.

Mendi Rodan has been appointed Musical Director of the Beersheba Chamber Orchestra after Avi Ostrovsky left his charges. Mr. Rodan will spend some four months this season with the BCO, and his influence, one hopes, will help to consolidate the orchestra and put it on the national map.

Here, too, a change has been made in the name. The "Chamber" has been omitted as it was felt that, with the addition of more musicians and subsequently the widening of the repertoire range, the development points to an "Orchestra" in its wider sense. Maybe, too, the Beershebas have an inferiority complex about having "only" a Chamber Orchestra. So, Beersheba Orchestra it will be from now on. May it grow and prosper.

The Jerusalem Symphony Orchestra has asked Gary Bertini to take over the leadership of the JSO. Protracted negotiations do not seem to have come to a satisfactory conclusion yet, and we shall hear soon from Mr. Bertini about his other plans and programmes.

THE Haifa Symphony Orchestra has also announced a change in direction: Yuval Zallouk has been released from his duties as chief conductor and musical advisor of the H.S.O., and his place has been taken by Dan Fogel, of whom so far very little is known. He has been conductor of the Petha Tikva (non-professional) chamber orchestra and conducted a Youth Concert of the Jerusalem Symphony Orchestra this season. As Haifa seems to be a particularly difficult place for running a symphony orchestra, Dan Fogel is probably in double need of good wishes for success in his task.

Stanley Sperber has been appointed musical director of the Rinat National Choir. Sperber, 35, American-born, came to Israel several times to conduct his New York Choir at the Zimrat and decided to stay on. In the meantime, he left it off to work with everybody that he is now in charge of the Chamber Choir of the Rubin Academy in Jerusalem, where he also teaches; he conducts the Tel Aviv Philharmonic Choir; and has conducted the Jerusalem Symphony and the Israel Philharmonic Orchestras.

The Rinat Choir, founded in 1955 by Gary Bertini as a semi-professional choral group, quickly established new standards for choral singing under his energetic and dedicated direction. Today, some 80 singers from all walks of life come together in Tel Aviv twice weekly to practise for their numerous appearances with the IFO, the JSO, and in their own programmes.

Avner Itai, the main conductor of the Huda Kibbutz Movement Choir and an excellent exponent of cultivated choir training, has formed a chamber choir at the Tel Aviv University, thus adding a most important platform for music education and training at this institution.

Bridge logic

THE WINNING PLAY was missed by the declarer in a Jerusalem tournament. It provides an interesting demonstration of bridge logic. Let us put ourselves in the West seat:

Opening lead the heart three

What should have been West's analysis after seeing the dummy? He had on top eight tricks, two spades, one heart, four diamonds and one club. He had, in all, 28 high card points. The opening lead denied the king-queen of hearts, so South must have one of these two honours. Since North had overcalled he should have all the outstanding high cards, a total of nine or ten points.

One obvious source for the extra trick needed was in clubs, but declarer dared not finesse. So his only hope was to put pressure on North. What would be the situation after declarer won seven tricks: two spades, four diamonds and one heart?

It would be most unlikely for North to blank the club king, and he would have to keep four hearts if he had any hope of setting the contract. So he would be left with four hearts and the king doubleton in clubs. All West had to do at this point would be to throw in North with a heart and enjoy the forced club return away from the king into the ace-queen. Here was the full hand:

In Memoriam David Clayton

THE DEATH in London last month of David Clayton will come as sad news to veteran Israelis who remember this paper when it was still The Palestine Post.

Written under the by-line of Micky Finn, Clayton's light-hearted weekly column Time on My Hands was blank with pleasure every Friday. His great talent was to be able to entertain and at the same time build bridges between people of different nationalities, religions, background and outlook. As a result, civilian readers in war-time Palestine got as much fun out of his humorous but compassionate comments and observations on the current scene as did the thousands of English-speaking soldiers serving in the Middle East during the Second World War.

Through his association with Gershon Agron and members of the editorial staff of The Post, Clayton formed deep bonds of friendship with Israel. Although subsequently his work took him to many countries and despite his final, six year illness, David's affection for this country remained with him to the end.

TEL AVIV STOCKS

Rumblings of falling prices

TEL AVIV. — Although financials held firm along a narrow front yesterday, there were ugly rumblings of falling prices among most stocks in other categories. The turnover was only 11.8m., a rather low figure for the past few weeks; of this, 11.0, 377,000 was in the "blue chips".

Index-linked bonds, however, began to perk up, with many rising one and two per cent in brisk buying. The turnover was 11.8m., 819,000, almost ten million pounds more than the previous day.

The Natad dollar ended its downward slide and began to make a better showing. It rose by 15 points to 11.1.67 after $1.08 were demanded. Even at this higher price many brokers were unwilling to part with their "goods", and supplied only $147,000 of the demand.

Even if financials held firm, turnover was much lower than on the previous few days, and not one of the market leaders had a turnover of one million. The fluctuations in price were quite narrow. If Bank Leumi picked up one point to meet a total demand of $14,700 to stand at 290.5, Miral also picked up by half a point to 219.5 (505,700). IDB also picked up one point to 352.5 with a turnover of 560,000.

This firm should be compared to what happened to some mortgage banks. Shikim (B) bearer, for example, opened at 292, quickly fell to 289, and then began to fight its way upwards, to close at 285. Some 591,000 shares traded hands. General Mortgage also fell, but by only five points to 327, with a turnover of 141.6. Arish Insurance was one of the few

Haute couture is coming to Gaza

By ZVI ARENSTEIN
Jerusalem Post Reporter

GAZA. — Arab women in Kuwait are wearing dresses made in Tel Aviv. Even Jordanian women return from visits to the West Bank or Gaza with newly acquired fashions bearing "Made in Israel" labels.

Haute couture has sprung up in Gaza, with local women and visitors buying from Fadda (silver, in English), a new dress shop on the town's main street, whose modern storefront would not look out of place on Rehov Dizengoff. It is typical of a new wave of fashionable shops which are beginning to open on this avenue which was formerly lined by closed businesses and destroyed buildings.

I spoke recently with Alla Shawwa who, along with her cousin Rawiya Shawwa, moved into the new Fadda store only a few months ago. "The shop was Rawiya's idea," Alla says. "She likes the dress line very much and used to make her own dresses while she was living in Kuwait. They are always talking about opening a business together and when I came back here from Lebanon we decided to go into partnership."

Alla worked in the insurance business in Beirut for 30 years. When the civil war broke out, she decided to send her son to study in America and return to her native Gaza.

All of Fadda's offerings, which include a fine selection of dresses, bathing suits, handbags, towels and linens, are made in Israel. They are handpicked especially for the store from the Aled, Danit, Alaska, Niba, Dorina and Gottex factories in Tel Aviv.

"We really have no choice about which dresses to carry here. Israeli duties on European designs make them too expensive for us to carry," Alla said.

"The Israeli lines are very fashionable, though," she continued. "My cousin recently bought what she thought was a French-designed dress in Paris, only to return to Gaza and find it hanging in our store with a Niba label."

"Our customers tell us that they could travel to Tel Aviv and walk up and down Rehov Dizengoff only to find the same dresses we stock here. We try to choose with their taste in mind. Our only problem is that we can't bring more than a few of each model, because we have such a close-knit circle of customers. Gaza is a small town and if one prominent woman buys a certain dress, then, of course, we must advise her friends and relatives not to buy the same model," the proprietress said.

Fadda has exclusive rights to market the Tel Aviv lines in Gaza. Alla told me that the owner of another modern dress shop which has opened not far away, went to Tel Aviv to see the dresses and convinced them to sell him dresses by telling them that his store was in Ra'fat. When Alla found out what had happened, the suppliers were informed and sales to the competitor were quickly stopped.

Are there really enough fashion-conscious women in Gaza to support these new stores? "There was always a class of women here who would travel to Cairo or Beirut to buy their dresses. At first they complained that our dresses were more expensive, but we told them to shop around and compare prices. Gradually even local teachers and secretaries, middle-class women, have started to come into the shop," Alla said proudly.

Fadda is the first store in Gaza to be run exclusively by women. "This makes our customers feel at ease. We don't allow men whom we don't know to enter the store. Women don't want strange men in the shop when they are selecting and trying on dresses. They begin to trust us, ask questions and really feel at home. We seem to be creating a sort of women's domain here," Alla emphasized.

Alla and Rawiya would like to open a local dress factory in the future, but meanwhile they are learning to cope with the ever-widening competition from other local merchants.

Reacting to Fadda's new approach, these have begun bringing in new merchandise and improving their storefronts. Signs of an improving economy in a town where investors had been hesitant for many years.

'Gold Moon' may sail soon, as dispute is being settled

By YA'ACOV FRIEDLER
Jerusalem Post Reporter

HAIFA. — The dispute between the seamen's ratings union and the Zim company, which has paralyzed the freighter "Gold Moon" in Haifa for over two weeks, appeared to be headed for a settlement last night.

This followed mediation efforts by the Labour Ministry's chief labour relations officer and the Histadrut's supreme committee on shipping. It seems likely that a compromise will make it possible to allow the ship to sail within a day or two, following a review of the dispute by the lawyers of the two sides.

In this way the union avoids the confrontation it appeared to be heading for with Zim. They had little chance of winning this, since the management has demonstrated its determination not to give in any longer to union demands it considers unreasonable.

Meanwhile the Zim company still delays acceptance of the new container ship "Sigal," built for it at the Israel Shipyards. The ship, the first of four $14m. vessels ordered from the yard, has been ready for delivery for the past fortnight, although this is almost two years behind schedule.

The Jerusalem Post learned that Zim delayed acceptance and naming of the ship, to make it clear to the unions that in the final analysis they were dependent on Zim, rather than the other way round. The third of the four ships in the series is to be launched next Friday.

Proposed amendment to company tax law to cost IL2b. a year

By SHLOMO MAOZ
Jerusalem Post Reporter

The Treasury is preparing an amendment to the Company Tax Ordinance which is intended to do away, at least partially, with the present system of taxing book profits resulting from inflation. The amendment may cost the Treasury as much as IL2b. a year. The Jerusalem Post learned.

According to present legislation, taxable profits are calculated according to the FIFO (first in, first out) method — that is, costs of raw materials and depreciation of capital equipment is calculated, for tax purposes, according to historical cost.

When there is price inflation, the renewal of inventories and capital stock costs more than the original purchase price. Businesses have therefore encountered financing difficulties in maintaining their volume of business. Industrial enterprises are to some extent compensated by being allowed to depreciate capital goods, for the first two years, at an accelerated rate of 80 per cent a year. Non-industrial enterprises do not have that benefit.

The alternative, of recognizing costs according to the LIFO (last in, first out) system, is difficult to implement, both for the firms and for the Income Tax Authorities. The professional committee of the Institute of C.P.A.'s has suggested a partial adoption of the Ronel Committee's recommendations for safeguarding the real value of foreign investors' capital investment, by linking the value of inventories to price increases during the year. Under this system, the Treasury would lose even more than IL2b.

The proposal now discussed in the Treasury is a compromise, which will link the cost of materials to price increases for the average period for which inventories were held, and not to price increases between the beginning and the end of the accounting year. This will in part eliminate the distortions caused by the present taxation of inflationary profits. At the same time it will limit the foreseeable loss to the Treasury to IL2b. a year.

Dr. Aaron Yoran, a Hebrew University expert on company taxation law, recommends the adaptation of the Ronel Committee proposals to all industrial enterprises, not only those which represent foreign investments.

According to these recommendations, not only the assets will be revalued for tax purposes, but also the liabilities. Firms would not pay taxes on what are mere book profits caused by inflation, but on the other hand would not gain from having obtained cheap directed credit. At the same time, Dr. Yoran says, the accelerated depreciation rates should be abolished.

Checking how share issues are sold

Jerusalem Post Reporter

The Securities Authority on Tuesday heard a report on a number of developments in recent capital issues, which give cause for concern. The Authority spokesman, Natan Ben-Dror, pointed to the heavy over-subscription of some issues, to the extent of several times the value of the issues floated, and to large credits given to subscribers to back up their demand for the shares.

There were also cases in which subscriptions were split into several smaller amounts. The apparent purpose of this was to obtain higher allocations than would have been available if the subscription had been made as a single amount. The assumption was that small subscriptions would be given preference.

The Securities Authority appealed to the commercial banks to refrain from granting credit for the purchase of shares and recommended that the Treasury and Bank of Israel impose restrictions on such operations. "The Authority will recommend that issuers allocate shares proportionately to the subscription, so as to prevent the splitting up of subscriptions."

It was also recommended that the issue quotations be determined by tender, so that the subscribers themselves will determine the price. At present the issue price is determined by agreement between the issuer and the underwriter.

Hassneh controls almost one quarter of all insurance business

By MACABEE DEAN
Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — The Hassneh insurance group (which includes Hassneh and its affiliates) now controls 22.6 per cent of all insurance business in the country, compared to 20.3 per cent in 1976, Eytan Avneyon, general manager of the company, said Wednesday.

Asked if this made the Hassneh group the largest company in the field, he said: "Yes and no. We are first in collecting elementary insurance premiums, but second in collecting life insurance premiums."

(The competition is Migdal.)

The 1976 profit and loss account shows that Hassneh made a profit of $30.5m. (IL45.1m. in 1975) before taxes; after taxes, the net profit was IL19.8m. in 1976 (compared with IL10.1m. in 1975).

However, Avneyon noted that the company lost on vehicle insurance, and made profits on life and fire insurance.

The total loss on elementary insurance was IL28m., but this was offset by interest on accounts which amounted to IL38m., thus providing for a IL12m. profit.

Life insurance brought a profit of more than IL7m.

Of the IL19.8m. net profit, some IL6.5m. was set aside in a reserve fund, while more than IL12m. was earmarked for dividends. The company approved 25 per cent bonus and 15 per cent cash dividends in 1976, compared with a 20 per cent bonus and 15 per cent cash in 1975.

Premiums for life insurance for 1976 were IL41m., a 43.5 per cent increase over the IL28m. of 1975. Elementary insurance premiums reached IL71m., a 65 per cent increase over the IL43m. of 1975.

Profits before taxes increased by 96 per cent from IL15.1m. in 1975 to IL30.5m. in 1976.

A MAJOR CONFERENCE on U.S.-Israel relations is planned for May of next year by the Hebrew University's Harry S. Truman Research Institute, to coincide with Israel's 30th anniversary and Truman's birthday.

Representatives of The World Sephardi Federation Met with the Prime Minister

The Prime Minister, Mr. Menachem Begin, received the members of the Sephardi Federation of Israel at the Prime Minister's residence. To this end, he proposed setting up, in conjunction with the government, a public fund which will help finance this programme. Concerning educational problems, the Prime Minister declared that he supports the educational policy which allows every child in Israel to attain at least a matriculation certificate, no matter what the financial level of poor families. Finally, he expressed his desire that permanent contacts and consultations between himself and the Federation will be established on all these subjects.

The Prime Minister thanked personally President Gaon for the unstinting activity he carries out in all areas for Israel, and members of the delegation for their greetings and best wishes. He concluded by emphasizing the importance of this programme and expressing his hope that it will be put into practice over the coming four years, so as to fulfil the aspirations of the Jewish people.

The DMC reconsiders

WEDNESDAY'S decision by the Secretariat of the Democratic Movement for Change makes it almost certain that the party will join Mr. Begin's government, possibly even before the Prime Minister's departure for Washington at the end of next week. The possibility of a surprise reversal by the DMC Council, which must approve the final decision, should not, of course, be ruled out, but neither should it be given too much weight.

There is, however, a spectre haunting the DMC: this is the spectre of the party's 200,000 voters who will be asking what precisely has changed since it was decided, nearly a month ago, at the behest of Prof. Yadin, to say no to joining the Likud government. The main purpose of the negotiations which will now be resumed may well be to find face-saving formulas with which to answer this question.

At the tactical level, Prime Minister Begin has clearly outmanoeuvred the DMC's neophyte politicians. Judging by the conditions they originally laid down for joining the government, the only change so far has been for the worse from the DMC's point of view.

This would seem to be the case in regard to the inflated size of the Cabinet; to the excessive concessions made to the religious parties; and the possibility of achieving any meaningful breakthrough on the issue of electoral reform. It is arguable that the DMC would have been in a better position to press its case on all of these issues had it decided to enter the government at the earlier stage — if that was at all possible.

A large segment of the DMC's rank and file and of its leadership is understandably driven by a visceral fear of remaining in the political desert for a full four years. The minority which voted against renewing coalition talks claims that this need not necessarily be so, and that there is a good chance that the present government will not last longer than a few months. To which those who favour joining in retort that such a course of events is not at all certain, and that in any case, given Israel's precarious international situation, it would be grossly unpatriotic to bank on a crisis to bring the government down.

The gravest danger to the DMC lies in the prospect of its assuming the image of an Independent Liberal Party writ large. This could happen if it insists on entering the government on the basis of mere face-saving formulas, rather than visible and tangible achievements.

The course of greater wisdom would be for the DMC to put off the conclusion of the negotiations until after Mr. Begin's return from Washington. By that time it should be clearer how much the Prime Minister really wants the DMC in his government, and what he is ready to concede in return for their joining in.

Closing the Eban file

ALL RIGHT-MINDED people who winced at the harassment of Abba Eban during the last three months will share in the sense of relief over the Attorney General's decision that the former Foreign Minister need not stand trial for foreign currency violations.

Prof. Barak's ruling means that Israel will be spared the self-abasement entailed in dragging one of the country's outstanding citizens through the mud on such charges — after witnessing a Prime Minister give up his job, only a few months ago, in the face of foreign currency violations.

And yet, while we may all be thankful for the happy end to Mr. Eban's personal nightmare, it must be admitted that there is something missing in the denouement. Prof. Barak has long since established his credentials as an objective and courageous Attorney General. But there is room for some doubt whether the form of his statement clearing Mr. Eban is adequate, given the public atmosphere that has developed around the case.

There is, after all, a gap between the Attorney General's finding that no copy of the permit allegedly issued to Mr. Eban to hold foreign currency abroad has been found, and his conclusions "which arose from the findings that Mr. Eban had in fact received a permit in writing in 1967."

The Attorney General would be well advised, therefore, to publish in full the findings of the investigation on which he based his recommendations. He would be doing himself and Mr. Eban a service.

In a larger context, this may be the time to return to the suggestion made to former Finance Minister Rabinowitz, when the allegations were first vented against Mr. Eban: that our cumbersome foreign currency regulations be radically revamped. Mr. Rabinowitz was not very responsive to the plea; perhaps his successor, Mr. Ehrlich, will be.

Marc Chagall at 90

CREATIVITY seems to be a recipe for longevity. Marc Chagall, who marked his 90th birthday this week, is one of a long line of artists and musicians who have reached this great age with all their creative faculties intact.

But for us, Chagall is not just another artist, nor even just another Jewish artist. He is also the most Jewish artist of all time: his work is suffused not only with images of Jews and the shtetl, but with the cabalistic mysteries and hassidic joys of the stream of Jewish life that flows, and files, like his images, somewhere over the rooftops of everyday life. His illustrations to the Bible, if nothing else, have helped make Jewish images as universal as the Bible itself.

Israel has special reason to honour Marc Chagall on this occasion, and not merely because of the marvellous windows and tapestries he has donated to Jerusalem. It is inexplicable, therefore, that nothing has been done here to mark his 90th birthday with a serious exhibition of his work.

Dear Jerusalem,

Thank you. And thanks again. Tomorrow, July 9, 1977, I'll be two years old. I'm happy because you and you alone helped me reach the age of two — in good health. So, on my birthday, I'd like to buy you a present. At midnight, join me in a birthday drink on the house.

It's a nice place to visit, but...

Eliezer Whartman, who had come to Israel from the U.S., queries a group of visiting American-Jewish college students about their attitude to the Jewish State and the possibility of them settling here permanently.

THE FIGURES speak for themselves. In 1974, 8,393 Jewish men, women and children emigrated from the U.S. and Canada to Israel. The number dropped to 3,065 in 1975. It fell to 3,042 in 1976.

Obviously something is drastically wrong when two great Jewish communities numbering close to 8 million have only one out of 2,000 of their members opting to settle in Israel every year — and that, all too often, not necessarily for good. It is rather puzzling, too, in view of the fact that almost 40 per cent of the over 800,000 tourists who visited Israel last year alone came from the U.S. — and most of them were Jews.

Israel, it seems is a nice place to visit, but not to live — not for American Jews, at any rate.

EVER SINCE the State was established, a debate has been going on here as to why American Jewry is failing to translate its loudly-professed Zionism into action. I put the question, not too long ago, to an Israeli who had recently returned from a tour of the campuses in a vain attempt to try to interest young American Jews to opt for Israel.

"They're not interested in challenges," he told me. "What they want is the security of a home in the suburbs, a well-paying job, and no commitments to anything. They'll discharge their obligations to the Jewish people by contributing to the UJA. They're a duplication of the college classes of the fifties."

More recently, I put the same question to a group of American-Jewish college students who had come to Israel on a study tour sponsored by a Jewish organization based on American campuses.

The replies were revealing, and disquieting.

"What does Israel mean to American Jewry?" I asked them first.

Most of the answers were uniform. "Without Israel, American Jewry, in the long run, aside from a handful of ultra-Orthodox Jews, could probably not survive as a creative Jewish community."

"Why?" I persisted.

"As far as our parents are concerned," came the replies, "Israel occupies the centre of their Jewish life: fund raising, belonging to

THE HORACE W. GOLDSMITH BUILDING

Not interested in challenges? (Barrie)

Israel-oriented organizations, etc. They regard Israel as the source of Jewish creativity, the prototype of Jewish life, a place to point with pride to their Gentile neighbours."

"And for you?"

"For us," the students said, "Israel represents the hope of Jewish continuity which we see diminishing daily on the campus through indifference to Jewish life. There is little Jewish challenge in the schools, and growing assimilation. Israel for us is a source of cultural stimulation, something which strengthens us, something to work for."

"Is there enough vitality intrinsic in American Jewish life without Israel to keep going?" I queried.

The answers were evasive. The synagogue played little role in their lives. While they appreciated the importance of Jewish education, most of them possessed only a limited Jewish background. The majority had had a few years of Hebrew school in most cases terminating with their bar mitzva or bat mitzva. A few had continued on to confirmation. One had attended a Hebrew day school, had continued through high school and was continuing evening studies at a Jewish Institute of higher learning while attending college.

All were unhappy over the state of Jewish education, believed that it was an uphill struggle. Although they were on a heavily subsidized Jewish Agency tour of Israel, few had any active contact with Hillel or with any other Jewish life on campus. Yet all of them thought that the trip had reinforced their Jewish identity.

"In that case," I asked, "why not come and settle here?"

THE REPLIES varied, but it was clear that very few among them had even contemplated the possibility.

A number of students were candid enough to admit that they feared another war might break out, and they didn't want to go into the army and possibly get killed. Others said that they would not be able to adjust to a standard of living lower than the American. Still others cited the language barrier, or their "at home" feeling in the U.S. A number could not envision separation from their families.

What emerged was a saddening picture. This was supposedly a picked group of Jewishly-conscious youth — and yet they could not envision aliya for themselves, although they recognized the centrality of Israel in their Jewish lives. What then can one expect from the mass of Jewish students?

It used to be said that a Zionist was a Jew who solicited money from a second Jew in order to send a third Jew to Israel. Today, not even that holds true, for the bulk of the funds raised for Israel comes from big givers who are not identified with — or who certainly are not active in — Zionist organizations. There is little to distinguish a Zionist from a non-Zionist today, when everyone wears the pin saying, "I am a Zionist."

Fostering Jewish solidarity

Formal, systematic consultation between American Jews and the Jews of Israel would help minimize friction between the two communities, says Zalman Abramov, director of policy studies for the American Jewish Committee. He is interviewed by David Krivine.

single-minded backing of Israel's cause over the last 30 years forms one of the glorious chapters of Jewish history. That unity could be impaired.

WHAT ISSUES are there that might cause such a division? The monopoly given by Begin's new Government to the Orthodox is one, and this could do untold harm.

"Suppose," Abramov says, "the Law of Return is so amended that henceforth an American who has converted to Judaism under Conservative or Reform auspices, and who wants to settle in Israel, is denied immigrant status on the ground that he is not a Jew — the situation would be explosive."

"Converts of that category together with their families, number tens of thousands of people, many of them active in Jewish affairs and stalwarts in Israel's defence. Don't forget the Conservative and Reform congregations constitute a large majority of the Jewish religious community in America. Their influence, both within and outside the Jewish community, is preponderant."

Mr. Abramov rejects the traditional Zionist theory which sees the Diaspora as no more than a place of exile. He believes that the Jewish community in America is there for good. The idea expressed by Ben-Gurion that any Jew wanting to have a say in Israeli affairs can do that only by settling in Israel has not got to be qualified, in Abramov's opinion.

Support for Israel will come in the main from Jews living inside America, not Jews immigrating to Israel from America. He concludes that the partnership with them should be extended from fund-raising to joint deliberations over policy questions.

It is a controversial standpoint, but he holds fast to it. "Our country is not only an Israeli State, it is also a Jewish State. It enjoys certain rights vis-a-vis the Diaspora, and conversely it owes certain duties to the Diaspora in its turn."

THE POLICY studies that the JDC plans to sponsor under Zalman Abramov's direction all relate to the possibilities of cooperation between Israel and the Jewish communities overseas.

Dr. Bernard Reznikoff, head of the AJC in Israel, recalls that a Task Force was created three years ago to examine what are the areas of activity in which the two communities can be mutually helpful. The method is to have Americans and Israelis discussing problems together. "If we launch a project on the health services, we shall invite the Director-General of the Health Ministry, and other prominent persons concerned with the subject, to join the Task Force," Reznikoff declares.

It sounds like a kind of technical assistance; but in reality it seems to be more than that. The destinies of the Jews abroad and in Israel respectively have come to be intertwined more tightly than the most fervent old-time Zionists could have expected. Jews in distant lands need the opportunity to understand how things are run in Israel, to express their particular philosophy of the good society, to suggest methods of rationalizing the administration of Israeli affairs.

They are affected by the results — as visitors, tourists, donors, supporters, allies, co-operatives. There is here a living partnership. It must be given voice, Abramov believes.

THE AJC, was founded in 1906 as a result of the Kishinev pogroms in Russia. It aims to protect Jewish rights, and to protect human rights in general. It supports Israel, though it is not a Zionist society.

Today it is concerned, like other reputable Jewish organizations in America, with sticking together in face of a common crisis. The overriding priority is to see the Jewish State through the crucial trials confronting it at the present moment on the international scene.

The traditional Jewish interdependence has become suddenly a more urgent matter. This is the occasion of Abramov's nomination to his new appointment. He wants, he says, to fill the relationship of interests that exists between Jews of different nationalities with content, by giving them a bigger role to play in each other's affairs. Otherwise the bonds may weaken again; and that would be fatal.

SHORTER WORK WEEK

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post

Sir, — Israel's trade unionists in concert with Israeli industrialists (which are one and the same here) have never read a report released some years ago in the United States which indicated that productivity had little to do with long working hours. In fact the report showed that workers working a four-day 30-hour week were far more productive than workers putting in a 35-hour five-day work week. The reasons had to do with the tempo of the working day and leisure which afforded the worker time to unwind and increased his overall efficiency.

This report did get some play in the Israeli press and then went into conflict with Israel-held sacred cows. Israeli industrialists supported by the Histadrut still believe, as did the capitalists during the dark ages of the industrial revolution, that maximum productivity is achieved by squeezing the worker dry and exploiting every free moment of the work force. How incongruous that such a notion should be held in a so-called socialist economy and supported by a trade union.
